

Denotation and Connotation

Denotation is the dictionary definition. But words include the writer's own thoughts and feelings. The thoughts and feelings associated with a word are called the connotation of that word. Words with the same denotation can have different connotations. Words often have positive, negative or neutral connotations.

Interpretation that goes beyond the dictionary examples with different connotations. Put a light pencil line next to the word for the word with a positive connotation, and a + connotation word that has a negative connotation.
