President over Congress:

Congress passes legislation but needs the president to sign the law.

The president can veto (reject) the bill (checking Congress).

Congress over president:

The president is commander in chief, but the Constitution gives Congress the power to declare war and set the military's budget.

Congress can override the veto by two-thirds vote of both chambers (balancing the president).

The president negotiates treaties, but the Senate must ratify them by two-thirds vote.

The president appoints ministers and Supreme Court justices, but Congress must approve (or confirm).

Congress has the ultimate power over all federal officers. The House can impeach (or formally accuse) the president.
