O. Jansson, 2013-01-01 Acclaim for the first edition This is a well written provocative book featuring much new material original data analyses and interesting insights Despite the proliferation of books on various aspects of services there is nothing quite like it around In particular examination of the challenges that the growth of services presents to conventional economics is very valuable Ian Miles University of Manchester UK This is an intriguing book that contains many interesting ways of conceptualising service from the perspective of economics It makes a number of important contributions to the academic literature It is one of the very few books and it might even be the only book to be written by an economist on the economics of services it is thus a pioneer work and is of value in that it attempts to bring together the work that economists have done on services John Bryson

University of Birmingham UK Despite the fact that services have overtaken industry in terms of employment and GDP in developed countries rigorous economic study of the service sector remains seriously neglected The first edition of The Economics of Services initiated a redress of this oversight Fully revised and updated the second edition of this highly acclaimed textbook should be required complimentary reading to mainstream microeconomics textbooks for graduate students of economics and for advanced courses in labour urban and regional economics economic geography and economic history The text emphasizes the distinction between intermediate producer services and final consumer services Many of the former are traded in global markets much like material goods in general whilst the markets for consumer services are markedly local This requires quite different micro foundations in each case Other key issues explored include the productivity development and quality of service measurements and the key role of urbanization for service sector growth The critical issues for the future of the real economy beyond the financial crisis are also analysed in depth and the author illustrates how a better understanding of the nature of the service economy is necessary for policy innovation with a view to regenerating the welfare state

Valuing forest ecosystem services: a training manual for planners and project developers Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2019-02-28 The degradation of ecosystems including forests and the associated loss of biodiversity particularly due to human induced threats and climate change has gained increased attention from scientists and policymakers The Millennium Ecosystem

Assessment presented a new conceptual framework that puts ecosystem services at the centre and links human well being to the impacts on ecosystems of changes in natural resources The Economics of Ecosystems and Biodiversity initiative drew further attention to the economic benefits of conserving ecosystems and biodiversity supporting the idea that economic instruments if appropriately applied developed and interpreted can inform policy and decision making processes Only a few ecosystem services however have explicit market value and are traded in open markets many especially those categorized as having passive use value remain invisible and are rarely accounted for in traditional economic systems The failure to appropriately consider the full economic value of ecosystem services in decision making enables the continued degradation and loss of ecosystems and biodiversity Most ecosystem services are considered public goods and tend to be overexploited by society Many methods have been applied to the economic valuation of ecosystem services The use of these methods as well as the interpretation of their results requires familiarity with the ecological political normative and socio economic context and the science of economics Recognizing demonstrating and capturing the value of ecosystem services can play an important role in setting policy directions for ecosystem management and conservation and thus in increasing the provision of ecosystem services and their contributions to human well being The aim of this manual is to enhance understanding of ecosystem services and their valuation The specific target group comprises governmental officers in planning units and field level officers and practitioners in key government departments in Bangladesh responsible for project development including the Ministry of Environment and Forests and its agencies Most of the examples and case studies presented herein therefore are tailored to the Bangladesh context but the general concepts approaches and methods can be applied to a broad spectrum of situations This manual focuses on valuing forest related ecosystem services including those provided by trees outside forests It is expected to improve valuation efforts and help ensure the better use of such values in policymaking and decision making Among other things the manual explores the basics of financial mathematics e g the time value of money discounting cost benefit analysis and profitability and risk indicators the main methods of economic valuation examples of the valuation of selected ecosystem services and inputs for considering values in decision making
