

Legislation

Although the legislation seems to not address these various current problems directly, they do seem to cover several existing gaps:

- The current rules have allowed by over 7% change the year. However, it is still above the 2.5 limit, which is a sign of good fiscal prudence, and it reflects the statutory average.
- They have enough a limit on the number of years that a school can be in a deficit.
- It is taking longer to collect money on average. By the 2015 they are just about halfway through the year.
- The amount is being reported on a regular basis (monthly) from the previous year while the current law is more irregular.

Recommendations

- Since the current rules have allowed by over 7% change the year, however, it is still above the 2.5 limit, which is a sign of good fiscal prudence, and it reflects the statutory average.
- They should not be allowed to be in a deficit for more than 2 years.
- They should not be allowed to be in a deficit for more than 2 years.
- It might be better to have a limit on the number of years that a school can be in a deficit, instead of having the amount be based on the number of years.
- The current rules have allowed by over 7% change the year, however, it is still above the 2.5 limit.
- The current rules have allowed by over 7% change the year, however, it is still above the 2.5 limit.

Summary

The primary rules have been discussed above.

- The current rules have allowed by over 7% change the year, however, it is still above the 2.5 limit.
- They should not be allowed to be in a deficit for more than 2 years.
- It might be better to have a limit on the number of years that a school can be in a deficit, instead of having the amount be based on the number of years.
