Home Health Care Owner Convicted for Defrauding D.C. Medicaid Program

The District of Columbia Medicaid Fraud Control Unit announced on July 13 that Jacqueline Wheeler, the Chief Executive Officer and owner of two health care companies, was convicted by a federal jury of one count of health care fraud and 34 counts of false statements for submitting more than $7 million in fraudulent claims to the D.C. Medicaid program.

Wheeler was convicted following a trial in the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia. She faces a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine for the health care fraud conviction and five years in prison and a $250,000 fine for each of the false statements convictions. The judge ordered that Wheeler be jailed pending sentencing.

According to the government's evidence, Wheeler was the chief executive officer of the Health Advocacy Center, Inc. She was also the owner of Sheridan Rehabilitative and Wellness Centers, Inc., a private company located at the same address.

Beginning in January 2006 and continuing through April 2008, Wheeler, through the Health Advocacy Center, submitted false claims for services that were not provided. She collected at least $2.6 million before the activities were detected. Evidence showed that she used the proceeds of her fraud to support the purchase of four luxury vehicles, two beachfront properties in Florida, and her home.

The Health Advocacy Center was purportedly engaged in serving as an advocate for improved health care delivery to the community. Specifically, it provided management support, as well as financial advice and assistance to other health care providers. It was a registered District of Columbia Medicaid provider.

Sheridan Rehabilitative and Wellness Centers was purportedly engaged in providing rehabilitative services to the mentally and physically disabled community, offering housing to mentally and physically challenged individuals.
