Kid Marriage: Why is the Act Performed Throughout Countries Worldwide? According to the International Center for Research Study on Women, "if present kid marital relationship trends continue, more than 142 million girls worldwide will be forced to marry adult men during the next decade-the equivalent of 38,000 ladies every day." Kid marriage is specified as marital relationship before the age of eighteen (International Center for Research Study on Women, 2012). This marital relationship is normally forced and comes as a shock to the girl. Any day, at anytime, a young girl can be taken from her home, offered, wed off, and forced to live a life filled with dangers, violence, and abuse. When I first heard of child marital relationship I assumed that it occurs in nations that aren't that well off, whom are still living in poverty. I was shocked when I learnt that kid marriage is a practice impacting ladies all over the world: Asia, Africa, the Middle East, and in some neighborhoods in Europe and the Americans (Worden, 2010). I wish to discover out all the typical concerns one would ask about an issue worldwide today: how, when, who, where, and WHY does child marital relationship even happen in all of these nations ?! After investigating these concerns in depth, among a few of these nations I wish to look into what child marriage might share in these different nations. In Afghanistan, stats show that an estimate of 67 percent of all marriages are forced and around 57 percent of ladies are married before the age of 16. (The Afghanistan Independent Human Being Rights Commission, 2010). Kid marriage happens in Afghanistan regardless of particular laws that have actually been made, due to culture and traditions, security of the child, and economic problems households might face. Kid marriage has actually belonged to Afghan culture for countless years, and trying to rid a country of a culture event angers a lot of the individuals living in Afghanistan. Child marital relationship is understood to be apart of Afghan culture as a form of protection. When one attempts to put an end to kid marriage in Afghanistan, the Afghans see this as breaking the culture and traditions of the neighborhood (Yousef, 2013). Parents of a young girl, believe they are doing the right thing by selling, giving away, or exchanging their child because they know she will be clothed, fed, and sheltered from the violence and sexual abuse that the country of Afghanistan is faced with. Under Afghanistans constitution, the minimum age for females is 16, but in rural and urban areas the tradition of marrying off daughters while young in order to receive money remains common among the poor. (Irinnews.org) Families living in poverty is one of the reasons child marriage is so high in Afghanistan. Some Afghan families can't afford to take care of their children once they are born, so their best solution is marrying off their daughters. They view this as "if she gets married, she will have something for herself". (Yousef, 2013) As if child marriage isn't a problem already, a huge problem arises once the marriage...

Research Paper Marriage:

Research Handbook on Marriage, Cohabitation and the Law Rebecca Probert, Sharon Thompson, 2024-05-02 This insightful Research Handbook provides a global perspective on key legal debates surrounding marriage and cohabitation. Bringing together an impressive array of established and emerging scholars, it adopts a comparative approach to analyse cross-jurisdictional trends and divergences in relationship recognition and family formation. Marriage and Values in Public Policy Elizabeth van Acker, 2017-01-20 Marriage is a site of political conflict. It is a controversial issue in the UK, Australia, and the US where there is a clash of values between neoliberal governments and diverse groups either strongly opposing or supporting marriage. In the meantime, fewer couples are marrying while other family forms are more widely accepted. This book explores this disconnect by examining policy issues such as class divides, ethnicity, religion, same-sex marriage, gender relations, and romantic expectations. A top-down approach explores different government policy responses to marriage. In all three countries, there are differences and similarities in how governments react to the changes in family formations, but values or conceptions of the desirable play a significant role. Enhancing stability and commitment, as well as personal responsibility, are important for policymakers who aim to keep the family intact and thereby lower the burden on the public purse. It is difficult for political actors to respond to conflicting and changing values surrounding the diversity in relationships or to translate them into policies. There is a strong case to be made for increased policy attention to adult relationships and a much weaker case for marriage. Rich evidence is drawn from interviews with key stakeholders as well as politicians' speeches, government departmental reports, stakeholders' documents, and responses to government policies and media articles. Transnational Marriage Katharine Charsley, 2013-05-02 Marriages spanning borders are not a new phenomenon but occur with increasing frequency and contribute substantially to international mobility and transnational engagement. Perhaps because such migration has often been treated as secondary to labor migration, marriage has until recent years been a neglected field in migration studies. In contemporary Europe, transnational marriages have become an increasingly focal issue for immigration regimes for whom these border-crossing family formations represent a significant challenge. This timely volume brings together work from Europe and beyond, addressing the issue of transnational marriage from a range of perspectives, including legal frameworks, processes of integration, and gendered dynamics, presenting substantial new empirical material and taking a fresh look at key concepts in this area. Forced Marriage Abu Sadik Maruf, 2012-04-25 Forced marriage is a serious abuse of human rights that involves physical torture and/or emotional blackmail by family. It is not merely an issue in the UK; it is an international issue that comes along with other problems such as domestic violence, inequality, and poverty. It can affect particular populations globally and locally. In the UK, hundreds of people, particularly girls and young women, are forced into marriage each year. Studies found that victims can be as young as 9 years old to older than 35.

and over South Asian communities are the largest ethnic minority group in the UK. In addition, there have historically been very articulate and powerful South Asian feminist groups that have challenged gender related issues within these communities including forced marriage, honour related violence and dowry related violence (Carroll 1998, Gangoli et al 2006). As a result, there has been much focus on Pakistani, Bangladeshi and Indian communities and therefore a wider recognition of the issue of forced marriage. However, it is also important to recognise here that a wide range of other minority ethnic religious as well as majority communities are also involved including African, Middle Eastern, Latin American and Eastern Europeans (Chantler, Gangoli, Hester 2009). This study addresses the international and cross cultural dimensions of a social problem. It mainly focused on British Bangladeshi community to know the circumstances of forced marriage in general and then evaluated the existing social work services in the UK. The main interest of the study was in the statements of particular groups of people including their personal views, perceptions and experiences on forced marriage.

Marriage and Divorce in a Multi-Cultural Context Joel A. Nichols, 2011-10-31. American family law makes two key assumptions: first that the civil state possesses sole authority over marriage and divorce and second that the civil law may contain only one regulatory regime for such matters. These assumptions run counter to the multicultural and religiously plural nature of our society. This book elaborates how those assumptions are descriptively incorrect and it begins an important conversation about whether more pluralism in family law is normatively desirable. For example, may couples rely upon religious tribunals (Jewish, Muslim or otherwise) to decide family law disputes? May couples opt into stricter divorce rules either through premarital contracts or covenant marriages? How should the state respond? Intentionally interdisciplinary and international in scope, this volume contains contributions from fourteen leading scholars. The authors address the provocative question of whether the state must consider sharing its jurisdictional authority with other groups in family law.

Marriage, Domestic Life, and Social Change David Clark, 1991. Marriage, Domestic Life and Social Change brings together leading writers on marriage and the family in a tribute to the life and work of Jacqueline Burgoyne, a major figure in family studies.

Cohabitation Great Britain: Law Commission, 2006-05-31. This consultation paper considers options for reform of the current law in relation to the property and financial rights of cohabiting couples, either opposite sex or same sex couples, when a relationship ends. Although the paper does discuss the situation in relation to when one of the partners dies, it focuses on whether a new scheme is needed to provide financial remedies on separation when a relationship breaks down. Amongst the provisional proposals, the Committee identifies the need for the introduction of new statutory remedies to address the separation of cohabiting couples who have children; however, the situation for cohabitants without children is found to raise more difficult social policy questions and the views of consultees are sought about their eligibility within the proposed scheme. Other proposals include that courts should be given discretion in determining financial claims on separation rather than having fixed rules for property division based on principles of the contributions of both parties to the joint household and to the welfare of dependent children both before and after separation with the provision for an opt out agreement for couples under the proposed statutory scheme Responses to the proposals should be received by 30th September 2006 and a final report is due to be published by August 2007 An overview document summarising the key issues considered is available separately ISBN 011730266X

Law Reform Commission,1975 Marriage Migration in Asia Sari K. Ishii,2016-02-26 Men are disadvantaged in the marriage markets of many Asian countries and in some cases their response is to look abroad for a partner Receiving countries for marriage migrants include Japan Korea Taiwan Hong Kong and Singapore while the Philippines Thailand Vietnam Indonesia and parts of mainland China supply wives to these territories In the absence of uniform international regulations concerning the rights and obligations of partners such unions are treated differently in different jurisdiction In extreme cases migrants or their children become stateless and when marriages break down migrants sometimes face major legal problems In such circumstances marriage migrants are often portrayed as powerless uneducated victims Rejecting this perspective the authors in this volume explore the agency of women who migrate abroad to acquire opportunities unavailable to them in their homelands They show that the trajectories of marriage migrants are often not a simple movement from home to destination but can involve return repeated or extended migrations and that these transitions that can alter geographies of power in economics nationality or ethnicity Based on features shared by many marriage migrants the book identifies them as an emerging minority at the frontier of the nation state a group whose status may well carry over to future generations

Research Papers ,1986 Marriage by Force? Annie Bunting,Benjamin N. Lawrance,Richard L. Roberts,2016-06-15 With forced marriage as with so many human rights issues the sensationalized hides the mundane and oversimplified popular discourses miss the range of experiences In sub Saharan Africa the relationship between coercion and consent in marriage is a complex one that has changed over time and place rendering impossible any single interpretation or explanation The legal experts anthropologists historians and development workers contributing to Marriage by Force focus on the role that marriage plays in the mobilization of labor the accumulation of wealth and domination versus dependency They also address the crucial slippage between marriages and other forms of gendered violence bondage slavery and servile status Only by examining variations in practices from a multitude of perspectives can we properly contextualize the problem and its consequences And while early and forced marriages have been on the human rights agenda for decades there is today an unprecedented level of international attention to the issue thus making the coherent multifaceted approach of Marriage by Force even more necessary

Migration and Marriage in Asian Contexts Zheng Mu, Wei-Jun Jean Yeung, 2021-11-29 This book analyses how Asian migrants adapt and assimilate into their host societies and how this assimilation differs across their sociodemographic backgrounds ethnic profiles and political contexts The diversities in Asian migrants assimilation trajectories challenge the assumption that given time migrants will eventually integrate holistically into their host societies This book captures the diverse patterns and trajectories of assimilation by going beyond marriage migration to look at how family formation processes are shaped by migration driven by reasons other than marriage Using quantitative qualitative and mixed method analyses not only does this book uncover the nuances of the link between marriage and migration but it also widens methodological repertoires in research on marriage and migration It also captures various social outcomes that may have been influenced by migration including migrants economic well being cultural assimilation subjective well being and gender inequality vis vis marriages This book further embeds the studies in the Asian contexts by drawing on individual countries unique policies relevant to cross cultural marriages the persistent impacts of extended families the patriarchal traditions and systems of religion and caste The chapters in this book were originally published as a special issue of the Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies
