

Although my research career has just begun, I have accumulated a strong background in several research fields and have developed a strong research foundation that will help to ensure my future success as a scientist. Over the last two years, I have gained undergraduate and graduate research experience in the three main areas of mammalogy: field research, laboratory techniques, and museum collections-based research.

In December 2003, I traveled to Colima, Mexico to work as part of a 26-member field crew that included students and professors from 7 U.S. universities and 2 Mexican universities. The 10-day trip investigated ecological interactions of rodents and small marsupials collected in Sherman traps, as well as documenting bat species using mist nets and carnivores using camera stations. Voucher specimens were collected and tissues were collected for molecular investigations and for a study looking at Hanta Virus prevalence in small mammals. From this work, I obtained an intense introduction to field research that resulted in my leaving my previous educational path toward medicine and developing a deep commitment toward a career in mammalogy. I also began developing a network of colleagues in diverse field of mammalogy that continues to this day.

During the summer of 2004, I conducted research while supported by a National Science Foundation Research Experience for Undergraduates grant. Working independently under the direction of three professors (Drs. M. A. Mares, J. K. Braun, and R. A. Van Den Bussche) at two universities (University of Oklahoma and Oklahoma State University), I conducted original research investigating the evolutionary histories (phylogenetic relationships and historical biogeography) of two genera of South American mice using DNA sequence data from the mitochondrial cytochrome-b gene. The end results of this research include three manuscripts and the description of four species new to science. From my REU-supported research, I gained an appreciation for South American mammals and a sincere interest in their taxonomy, systematics, and natural history.
