September 2015 Intake At Mount Kenya University:

Handbook of Transnational Environmental Crime Lorraine Elliott, William H. Schaedla, 2016-07-27 Crimes associated with the illegal trade in wildlife timber and fish stocks pollutants and waste have become increasingly transnational organized and serious. They warrant attention because of their environmental consequences, their human toll, their impacts on the rule of law and good governance, and their links with violence, corruption, and a range of crossover crimes. This ground-breaking multi-disciplinary Handbook brings together leading scholars and practitioners to examine key sectors in transnational environmental crime and to explore its most significant conceptual, operational, and enforcement challenges. The Atlas of Water Maggie Black, 2016-09 Water may soon be one of our most valuable commodities. The growing demands made on a finite resource by an increasing number of people adopting urban lifestyles and western diets, coupled with a changing and less predictable climate, are putting pressure on the planet's freshwater supply as never before. By 2025, four billion people may be living in conditions of water stress. And even where water is plentiful, the poor are unlikely to have ready access to a safe, cheap supply. The new edition of this timely atlas analyzes the latest thinking and emerging issues. Completely updated, it maps the competing claims on limited water resources made by farmers, industrialists, and householders and investigates the nature of the resource, its uses, and abuses, as well as the vexed question of how it can be managed equitably. Page 4 of the cover. Negotiating Identities in Contemporary Africa Toyin Falola, Emmanuel M. Mbah, 2023-08-29 Negotiating Identities in Contemporary Africa: Gender, Religion, and Ethno-cultural Identities explores the changing dynamics of identities in Africa with a focus on gender, ethno-cultural, and religious identity. Toyin Falola and Emmanuel M. Mbah argue that because identity defines who we are, as individuals or groups, studies on African identities must focus on understanding the changing dynamics in the socio-economic and political spheres in the continent. These chapters cover subjects such as women's career identity, gender roles, and knowledge, childlessness, ethnocentrism, and democracy, cultural identity through theater, Black identity in the diaspora, and diasporic consciousness. Using existing scholarship, the chapters in this edited volume challenge our understanding of what identity entails and provide new discussions on the hitherto politicized historiography of some identities in Africa. Food safety in Kenya: Focus on fruits and vegetables Yen, Eric, Hoffman, Vivian, Grace, Delia, Karugia, Joseph, 2018-03-16 Consumption of fruits and vegetables is important for maintaining good health and preventing chronic disease. Kenyans consume too little of these foods relative to dietary recommendations. Contaminated fruits and vegetables are an important conduit of foodborne disease (FBD), which represents a significant share of the global burden of disease, particularly in Africa. Improving the safety of fruits and vegetables and increasing their consumption are both important for improving population health. Concern about food safety is high among consumers who shop at supermarkets and specialty grocery stores in Nairobi, and prices for fruits and vegetables in these outlets are far above those observed in open-air markets. This suggests significant potential for farmers to benefit economically from the production of safe, high-quality produce if credible certification systems can be developed The FBD burden as well as premium market opportunities for horticultural producers are set to continue to increase in Kenya as a burgeoning middle class demands a more diversified and nutritious diet Risk of FBD can be reduced at every stage from farm to fork Increasing awareness among farmers processors retailers and consumers is thus a critical step toward safer food in Kenya The Kenyan government has laid out a comprehensive set of actions to improve food safety in the 2013 National Food Safety Policy but these have yet to be implemented Many of these interventions could be taken up by county governments Success by KEPHIS in the enforcement of regulations in crops destined for export demonstrate the potential for public action to improve food safety in Kenya and should be emulated in the domestic market

Gender, Climate Change and Livelihoods Joshua Eastin,Kendra Dupuy,2021-07-26 This book applies a gendered lens to evaluate the dynamic linkages between climate change and livelihoods in developing countries It examines how climate change affects women and men in distinct ways and what the implications are for earning income and accessing the natural social economic and political resources required to survive and thrive The book s contributing authors analyze the gendered impact of climate change on different types of livelihoods in distinct contexts including urban and rural and in diverse geographic locations including Asia Africa and the Caribbean It focuses on understanding how public policies and power dynamics shape gendered vulnerabilities and impacts how gender influences coping and adaptation mechanisms and how civil society organizations incorporate gender into their climate advocacy strategies
