TEK 7.5C: Food Web Energy Flow

TEK 7.5C: Diagram the flow of energy through living systems, including food chains, food webs, and energy pyramids.

Energy Flow in Ecosystems

- Almost all of the energy that supports life on Earth first came to Earth as sunlight, which is radiant or electromagnetic energy.
- Plants use the radiant energy in sunlight to rearrange the bonds in carbon dioxide (CO_2) and water (H_2O) to make sugar ($\text{C}_6\text{H}_{12}\text{O}_6$). This process is called photosynthesis. The full chemical equation for this reaction is: $6\text{CO}_2 + 6\text{H}_2\text{O} + \text{radiant energy} \rightarrow \text{C}_6\text{H}_{12}\text{O}_6 + 6\text{O}_2$. This chemical reaction changes radiant or electromagnetic energy into chemical energy.
- The bonds between the carbon, hydrogen and oxygen atoms in sugar store the chemical energy.
- Plants are collectively called the primary producers in food webs, because they produce all of the food that supports the rest of an ecosystem's life forms, using the photosynthesis energy conversion process.
- Herbivores, animals that eat only plants, get all of their energy from plants. In a food web, they are called primary consumers.
- All consumers use the chemical energy stored in plants by converting that energy into mechanical or thermal energy, in a chemical reaction called cellular respiration. The equation for cellular respiration is exactly the reverse of the photosynthesis reaction: $\text{C}_6\text{H}_{12}\text{O}_6 + 6\text{O}_2 \rightarrow 6\text{CO}_2 + 6\text{H}_2\text{O} + \text{energy}$.
- Animals that eat these herbivores (primary consumers) are carnivores or omnivores called the secondary consumers.
- Animals that eat the secondary consumers are called tertiary (third-level) consumers.
- A food chain or food web is a diagram that shows the flow of energy from the plants (primary producers) to the herbivores (primary consumers) to the omnivores and carnivores (secondary and tertiary consumers). The arrows in a food web show the direction of energy flow.
- A food chain shows only one possible sequence of energy flow, while a food web shows more of the alternate paths of energy flow. No food web can show all of the possible energy paths.
