Bstan-'dzin-rgya-mtsho, 2017-07-11 The Sixth Ling Rinpoche 1903-83 was a towering figure in Tibetan Buddhism. Combining great learning with great humility, he was ordained by the Thirteenth Dalai Lama and went on to serve as the head of the Geluk tradition and as the senior tutor to the present Dalai Lama. In temperament and wisdom, he had a profound influence on the Dalai Lama's spiritual development, and he became a steadying presence for His Holiness during the chaotic changes that defined the Tibetan experience of the twentieth century, with the invasion of their country by Communist forces and the subsequent rebuilding of their culture in India. Ling Rinpoche's extensive travels among exiled communities abroad and across India buoyed the spirits of the Tibetan diaspora, and the training and activities of this consummate Buddhist master, here told by the Dalai Lama in the traditional Tibetan style, will inspire and amaze. American Journal of Islamic Social Sciences 22:3

Adam Jacobi, 2007-01-01 Discusses how student congress debate mirrors the debate process used by legislative bodies and presents ways that students can pick and research topics, write speeches, and successfully conduct themselves during debates. Best Kind of College, The Susan McWilliams, John E. Seery, 2015-07-06 Small college professors from across the United States explain why liberal arts institutions remain the gold standard for higher education. The fevered controversy over America's educational future isn't simply academic; those who have proposed sweeping reforms include government officials, politicians, foundation officers, think-tank researchers, journalists, media pundits, and university administrators. Drowned out in that noisy debate are the voices of those who actually teach the liberal arts exclusively to undergraduates in our nation's small liberal arts colleges or SLACs. The Best Kind of College attempts to rectify that glaring oversight. As an insiders' guide to the liberal arts in its truest form, the volume brings together thirty award-winning professors from across the country to convey in various ways some of the virtues, the electricity, and overall the importance of the small seminar, face-to-face approach to education as typically featured in SLACs. Before we in the United States abandon or compromise our commitment to the liberal arts—oddly enough, precisely at a time when our global competitors are discovering, emulating, and founding American-style SLACs and new liberal arts programs—we need a wake-up call, namely, to the fact that the nation's SLACs provide a time-tested model of educational integrity and success. At last, some good news about education. This collection brings together essays by professors at small liberal arts colleges voices largely unheard in the debates raging about higher education It ranges widely through disciplines and across colleges taking us into classrooms where we see the creative inventive kinds of teaching that go on when classes are kept small and professors can interact with students This book is a welcome corrective to claims that higher education is broken and in need of a high tech fix a quiet reminder that innovation goes on as a matter of course at colleges where teaching is top priority and is kept to human scale Gayle Greene Scripps College McWilliams and Seery have achieved something remarkable they have found a new and interesting way to present the case for the liberal arts model in American education More than that they have managed to show the value of as well as present the argument for the model At its best the book recreates something of the experience of a liberal arts education in microcosm This is a wonderful provocative engaging and moving book It is unlikely to be surpassed Simon Stow author of Republic of Readers The Literary Turn in Political Thought and Analysis Job The Navigators,2018-08-07 This Bible study on the book of Job delves deep into the Scripture to see how brokenness can yield hope and a new maturity in Christ The Art of Debate - 14th Edition N.
