Research in Education ,1972 Commentary ,1958 Science and Society in the Classroom Geeta Verma,2009 In this book the author posits that the exploration of urban students engagement with school science using sociocultural perspectives may uncover factors that influence students learning and success in the science classrooms The author further proposes that using curricula framed around sociocultural perspectives may develop students understandings about the role science and technology plays in their lives as well as in the larger society thus making science more accessible and relevant for these children in urban settings There has been no study to date that examines the impact of curricular approaches guided by a sociocultural framework contextualized curriculum in this study on the comprehension level and attitudes of students The study fills that gap and holds implications for the inclusion of alternative curricular framework in urban middle school science classrooms The author has used a mixed methods study and draws upon both quantitative and qualitative data sources The study design allows the reader to appreciate the perspectives of participating students and teachers on the use of contextualized curricular framework versus curricular framework guided by IVF practices in urban middle school science classrooms BOOK JACKET Autism Spectrum Disorders Angi Stone-MacDonald, David F.

Embracing Diversity in the Learning Sciences Yasmin

B. Kafai, 2012-10-12 More than a decade has passed since the First International Conference of the Learning Sciences ICLS was held at Northwestern University in 1991. The conference has now become an established place for researchers to gather. The 2004 meeting is the first under the official sponsorship of the International Society of the Learning Sciences ISLS. The theme of this conference is Embracing Diversity in the Learning Sciences. As a field, the learning sciences have always drawn from a diverse set of disciplines to study learning in an array of settings. Psychology, cognitive science, anthropology, and artificial intelligence have all contributed to the development of methodologies to study learning in schools, museums, and organizations. As the field grows, however, it increasingly recognizes the challenges to studying and changing learning environments across levels in complex social systems. This demands attention to new kinds of diversity in who, what, and how we study, and to the issues raised to develop coherent accounts of how learning occurs. Ranging from schools to families and across all levels of formal schooling from pre-school through higher education, this ideology can be supported in a multitude of social contexts. The papers in these conference proceedings respond to the call.
