Before mRNA

How is RNA different to DNA?

- ① RNA has a ribbit sugar - in DNA it's deoxyribose.
- ② RNA has acell bases instead of alkyets.
- ③ RNA is usually single stranded while DNA is usually double stranded.

How does transcription work? DNA is unzipped so its bases are exposed. RNA polymerase attaches to a promoter sequence of DNA and begins to add complementary RNA nucleotides one at a time. It builds up a strand of messenger RNA, also called mRNA. In eukaryotes, the mRNA has non-coding regions called introns - these must be removed in a process called splicing. The mRNA then leaves the nucleus through nuclear pores.
