Large Building Footprints: Although the average building footprint in the Phoenix-Mesa-Gilbert Combined is larger than the regional average, it is smaller than the average footprint in the Las Vegas-Clark County MSA and the San Diego MSA. In the Phoenix MSA, almost the entire urban area is built on previously undeveloped land.

These data indicate that the system is robust and tolerant to variation, with the results for a 20-year 50 degree climate projection to fall into the 10-1000 range. The results are interpreted as providing a broad, generalised, regionalised indication of the potential for a significant reduction. This equipment represents a cost and can reduce water harvesting storage and, if not installed and used in conjunction with the infrastructure, this could further contribute to water conservation. However, there is no guarantee that implementation will result in a significant reduction.
