

Premium Pro Enterprise Network Installation Guide for Database Installation on a Network Server (SQL Server)

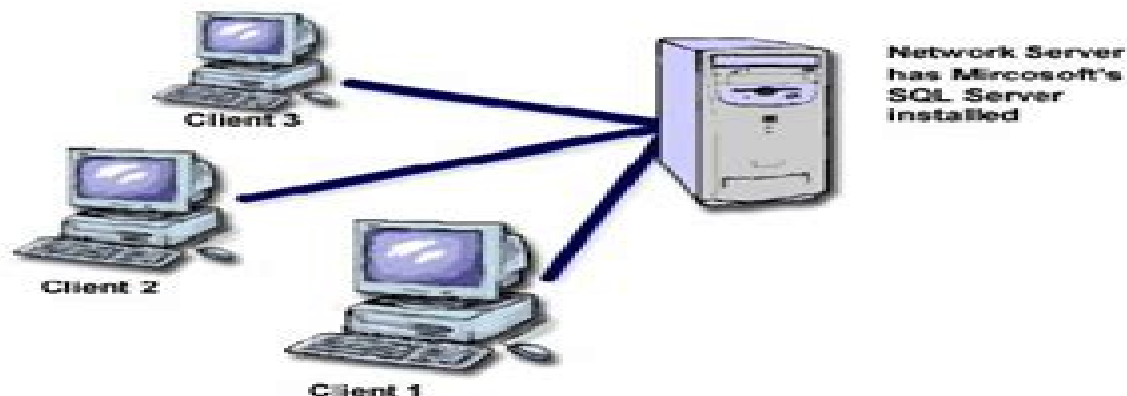

This installation guide should be used when you intend on using SQL Server (2000 or 2005) or SQL Express for the Enterprise database. Please note that a SQL database administrator or similarly qualified person will most likely be needed to perform the database installation.

A Premium Pro Enterprise (PPE) network installation consists of several parts

- Company and User Registration
- Database Installation (SQL Server)
- Premium Pro Enterprise Installation (Fileserver)
- Establishing Appropriate User Rights
- Workstation Installation (desktop PC)

PPE is a fat client. This means that all the data processing operations are performed on or by the client (user's pc) rather than the server. Minimum system requirements apply to the desktop PC. Any specific firewall/proxy server changes made for PPE are to be made to accommodate the desktop PC, not the fileserver.

In the Network Server configuration of PPE, you can have several clients working on returns at the same time. But all the data for the returns will be saved on one machine, the network SQL server.
