At Lake Umbagog, University of Maine, Orono, in 1960, James H. Hight and George A. Jones (1962) reported the following effects. They examined 100 fish in the 10 night Lake Umbagog laboratory experiment and found that 60 per cent of the males showed a blue pigment on the gill cover scales. This pigment was described as comparable with pigment previously described by

Abstract The purpose of this study was to investigate the effects of a 6-week training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life of sedentary elderly people. Thirty-two participants were randomly assigned to either a control group or an exercise group. The exercise group performed a supervised aerobic and resistance training program three times per week. The control group did not participate in any structured exercise program. Pre- and post-test measurements were taken at baseline and after 6 weeks. Results showed significant improvements in cardiovascular fitness, muscle strength, and balance in the exercise group compared to the control group. These findings suggest that a structured exercise program can effectively improve physical fitness and health-related quality of life in sedentary elderly individuals.
