GOVERNANCE AND POVERTY REDUCTION AMITA SINGH, KAPIL KAPOOR, RABINDRANATH BHATTACHARYA, 2008-12-04 Poverty reduction in South Asia is a precondition for sustaining any form of reforms in governance The new public management reforms which started in South Asia from Sri Lanka taking the initiative in 1977 78 have been a decisive break from the previously practised State driven protectionist system Investment in the region has been rising and even per capita income has shown some increase yet the state has not been able to lead these reforms appropriately and efficiently Thus poverty has not been reduced ordinary people continue to languish under government programmes and the socially excluded remain outside the mainstream decision making bodies Governance in South Asia faces the single most important challenge of poverty reduction which continues to blunt and disfigure capacity self esteem and service delivery system to the poor This book attempts to bring out microlevel studies from many regions in South Asia to address issues of entrepreneurship knowledge and professionalism As an initiator of the idea on developing a critique to the straightjacketed best practice research this book questions the standard practice in evaluating administrative reforms as not being the true base for knowledge Administrators need to balance capacity and control in every implementation programme Confining to the knowledge of best practices may conceal enormous amount of information from the less than best practices which may be necessary to sustain good initiatives of public managers This book highlights areas of active networking partnerships and collaborations amongst state and non state bodies NGOs and specialist Science and Technical Organizations The true nature of governance is explained and demonstrated through the processes which otherwise pass off undetected in macro understanding of governance

Politics of People's War and Human Rights in Nepal Bishnu Pathak, 2005 The Geographical Journal, 1900 Includes the Proceedings of the Royal geographical society formerly pub separately The Economist, 1997 Paperbound Books in Print, 1992 The Right to Education Shalu Nigam, 2015 Right to Education in India ensures that every child under the age of 14 years must be provided with free and compulsory education. However, to make this a reality, a continuous effort is required on the part of the state to ensure that both the quantitative and qualitative requirements are met. This means not only increasing availability of and accessibility to schools, classrooms, teachers, and infrastructure facilities across the country, but also there is a need to improve the quality of education. However, this has not happened, and many children remain out of the purview of the Right to Education (RTE), specifically those who hail from poor and marginal families. The 10th Annual Status of Education Report released by Pratham recently, which audited elementary education in rural India, observed that though enrollment level is rising, yet learning levels remain poor. Further, a large number of children remain excluded from the purview of RTE because for these children, navigating through the maze of poverty to reach the corridors of education is a challenge. Reasons being that the state has failed to link up the Right to Education with larger socio-economic realities of masses in the neo-liberal regime. Also, commercialization of education is a major concern. In other words, RTE has to be seen in a comprehensive manner while considering not only availability of infrastructure, teachers, or facilities, but also in terms of the quality of education and its meaningfulness in the changing world. Learning Blocks, 2013. The Right to Education. Karen Hadley, University of Newcastle upon Tyne. School of Education, Communication and Language Sciences, 2007.

Experiences from Grassroots, 2014. The Right to Learn. Ken Brown, 2002-11. The Right to Learn raises questions about the future of the learning society. It suggests that the rights of children and parents are not being addressed by the UK Government's concentration on a highly centralized education system. State, Civil Society, and Right to Education. Jeebanlata Salam, 2013. The right to an education has been a major concern on the global level as well as in developing countries like India, both in the domains of state and civil society. Making education a fundamental entitlement is a landmark development between a nation and its children, further strengthened by various civil society organizations working towards the similar goal. However, despite developments in India, various socio-cultural issues continue to pose a huge challenge to achieve this goal. As such, the human rights approach to education is to be understood in the tradition of the social, economic, and political realities. This book examines school education and its interlocking relationship with the larger social, political, and economic dynamics of the state of Manipur in India. To achieve a radical education agenda such as the right to education, requires societal reforms and not just reforms in the education sector alone. The book sheds light upon the regional challenges which are a part of the nationwide phenomenon. The Right to Education in India. Florian Matthey-Prakash, 2019. What does it mean for education to be a fundamental right and how may children benefit from it? Whoever has a right must also be able to claim that right and not be dependent on the state choosing to provide for the right out of its own benevolence. This text shows why this aspect is of core importance for the right to education and how the constitutional promise might be made a reality. RIGHT TO EDUCATION. AGOSTINHO. MONTEIRO, 2024.
