History of Technology Volume 29 Ian Inkster, 2016-09-30 The common question from the western point of view is of the sort why did China lose its early leadership of productive technologies to Europe during the early modern period Answers to this seemingly clear enquiry vary from general cultural inwardness to the interferences of imperial governance This collection surveys such theories but alters the issue by raising the notion that Chinese technologies did not so much fail as move along a path different from that of Europe Our second collection on the Mindful Hand also shifts common ground by querying and modifying common views of the links between knowledge and technique in early modern European development Scientific or related knowledge was not brought to technique as a socio cultural gift from an educated elite to the working man Rather educated gents practitioners instrument makers craftsfolk and technicians of all kinds intermingled both socially and in terms of the recognition of technical problems as well as in the assemblage of the mental commercial and cognitive resources required to pursue innovative production projects

Wisdom's Odyssey Peter A. Redpath, 2021-11-01 This book establishes that the ancient Greeks had a prevailing method of doing philosophy which was rooted in philosophical realism Through extensive historical and philosophical analysis it demonstrates that this method was challenged in ancient times by an apocryphal notion of philosophy which eventually became confused with philosophical reasoning and was passed on to posterity through the work of Christian theologians until it was called into question by leading thinkers of the thirteenth century It shows how this thirteenth century challenge influenced the growth of the Renaissance humanist movement and how this movement in turn passed on to modernity the same apocryphal notion of philosophy as a rhetorical theology of allegorical prefiguration
