Lab 2: Sunspot Analysis

Introduction:

Photos of the Sun show dark areas on its surface. These spots are believed to be due to solar storms, areas of cooler gases on the surface. These storms can interfere cell phone and radio communication and can disrupt the function of electrical grids here on Earth. In 1989, the number of sunspots reached a maximum causing a power surge, which damaged transformers in the Hydro-Quebec power system, leaving six million homes in Canada and the U.S. without electricity.

The number and pattern of these sunspots change with time. When the data is collected over many years and graphed a pattern emerges. This picture-like representation makes it easier to see relationships that are not obvious from a column of numbers.

Objectives: Students will determine patterns in scientific data by creating and analyzing graphs.

Vocabulary:

Cyclic-

Dependent Variable-

Extrapolate-

Independent Variable-

Predictable-

Procedure: Graph the data that is in the data table. Use time as the independent variable and the number of sunspots as the dependent variable. Be sure to completely label each axis with appropriate scales and units.
