The Body Corporate Handbook Stephen Raff, 2011-11-07 Population growth rising property prices and the dream of a new lifestyle have made body corporate living more and more popular in Australia. Living in an apartment unit or townhouse can be a rewarding experience but body corporate life can also be confusing. In this book, expert author Stephen Raff clarifies the rules and answers vital questions such as: What should I look out for when buying a strata property? What are the responsibilities of the body corporate owners and tenants? How do committee meetings work? What fees will I have to pay? Who takes care of maintenance? What happens if I get into a dispute? Packed with revealing case studies and state-specific information, The Body Corporate Handbook is a comprehensive guide to every aspect of strata life for owner occupiers, tenants, and investors.

Managing Government Property Assets Olga Kaganova, 2006 Governments own a vast array of real property from large stretches of land to public housing projects from water distribution systems and roads to office buildings. Typically, management of public property is highly fragmented with responsibility for each type of asset falling within a different agency or bureaucracy. In almost all countries, different classes of property are managed according to their own rules, often following traditional practices rather than any assessment of what type of management is appropriate. Over the past decade, however, a new discipline has emerged that examines this important component of public wealth and seeks to apply standards of economic efficiency and effective organizational management. Managing Government Property Assets reviews and analyzes this recent wave of activity. The authors draw upon a wide variety of national and local practices both in countries that have been leaders in management reforms and in countries just beginning to wrestle with the problem. This comparison reveals that the issues of public property management are surprisingly similar in different countries despite striking differences in institutional contexts and policy solutions.

Institutions, Transaction Costs, and Environmental Policy Ray Challen, 2000-01-01 This is an excellent piece of work applying the economic theory of property rights and transaction costs to the complex policy problems associated with water use in irrigation Challen examines the determination of transaction costs and the way they interact with a realistic specification of property rights He thereby avoids the two main defects found in much work in this area first the use of a simplistic division of property rights schemes for example one based on polar categories of private property and common property defined to mean open access and second a tendency to use the category of transaction costs as an unexamined black box John Quiggin James Cook University Australia A most encouraging trend in economics concerns the careful and non teleological study of institutions From an era in which institutions were completely ignored through an era in which it was thought that institutions were mere constraints on otherwise beneficent behavior in markets through an era in which it was thought that the purpose of institutions was to promote economic efficiency we now seem to be firmly in an era in which it is understood that institutions are the very bedrock of economic and social interaction The analysis of institutions will fall into incoherence if we insist on seeing them as teleological rather than as instrumental Once there we must still understand the purposes that different individuals and collectivities ascribe to particular institutional set ups In this careful book Ray Challen offers clear conceptual guidance to the study of economic institutions He also shows us how one can undertake the analysis of institutional choice The problem setting is water resources in eastern Australia The lessons are profoundly international and the approach is refreshingly promising Daniel W Bromley University of Wisconsin Madison US Conventional economic analysis of property rights in natural resources is too narrow and restrictive to allow for effective comparisons between alternative institutional structures In this book a conceptual framework is developed for the analysis of these structures with illustrative application to the allocation of water resources

The Adult Guardianship Experiment Terry Carney, David Tait, 1997 During the 1980s Australia remade its adult guardianship laws that governed people unable to manage their own affairs or property The reforms embraced UN principles and took a common pattern with reformist North American and European countries with one key exception The rest of the world chose courts to administer the laws Australia created specialist multi disciplinary tribunals This book compares the work of guardianship tribunals and courts and argues forcefully that Australia's adult guardianship experiment in popular justice is a success Carney and Tait present work on the Australian tribunals in NSW and Victoria and compare them with overseas studies on courts and the Family Court of Australia On every measure tribunals outperform courts They are more inclusive They pay more attention to social context and functioning and are better at incorporating the affected person into the hearing striking an alliance with them Courts by contrast favour alliances with families and the medical profession Even in areas where courts might be expected to perform better they are less successful than the tribunals collecting and testing evidence and avoiding unnecessary intervention

The Role of Trees in Sustainable Agriculture R.T. Prinsley, 2012-12-06 Agroforestry research and development in Australia has been largely fragmented and many of the research results have never been published and are unknown The purpose of this volume is to comprehensively review all of the research that has taken place in the field of agroforestry in Australia including previously unpublished results providing readers with the latest technical and economic information about using trees in agriculture for the control of salinity and erosion for shelter and shade and for the production of timber fodder and minor forest products The book provides information concerning planted trees within all of these categories and includes special review of the management of native vegetation on farms These papers also examine research needs where appropriate This book stems from the National Australian Conference on The Role of Trees in Sustainable Agriculture which took place in Albury Victoria Australia in October 1991 Each national review paper is based upon a summary of six or more state review research and development papers prepared specifically for the national conference The book thus provides readers with a comprehensive overview of agroforestry research in Australia which is introduced and summarised in the first chapter The State Reports, South Australia South Australia.
