

and defenders; they are there to serve the people of USA. West Point's Military Academy is a renowned name in preparing graduates who have an extreme sense of duty and honor for their country. In addition, the graduates are also well disciplined. I have always been inspired by discipline of cadets. I believe that's the way life should be: organized and well planned; for discipline makes man superior to other creatures. Personally I'm a disciplined person; I like to organize my life whenever I can. I believe that discipline is the key to achievement. If one goes well planned and disciplined there's nothing that cannot be achieved. In addition, I am persistent by nature. When I start something, I rarely give it up or quit on it and I like challenging tasks like problem solving in limited time.

Once I do get the chance to attend US military academy, I'd definitely want to work as an active duty army officer. I'd prefer active duty since I want to devote my whole life to US Army, I long to be a part of it. I'm also inspired by the military life.

Reporting daily, being posted at a base camp; where I can learn about Army life and its challenges. Going to the USMA will also be good for my health. Undergoing physical training and extensive exercise daily will make me physically strong and daily drills will develop more discipline within me.

Above all, I want to join the USMA so that I can become a part of US Army; this will be my self-actualization. Being in the US Army is my lifelong dream and I cannot derive a greater sense of achievement than knowing that I am a part of the Army of this
