replacement for the battlecruiser Amagi which had been damaged during the 1923 Great Kanto earthquake Kaga was rebuilt in 1933 increasing her top speed improving her exhaust systems and adapting her flight decks to more modern heavier aircraft The third Japanese aircraft carrier to enter service Kaga figured prominently in the development of the IJN's carrier striking force doctrine The doctrine which grouped carriers together to give greater mass and concentration to their air power was a revolutionary strategic concept at the time The employment of this doctrine was crucial in enabling Japan to attain its initial strategic goals during the first six months of the Pacific War Kaga's aircraft first supported Japanese troops in China during the Shanghai Incident of 1932 and participated in the Second Sino Japanese War in the late 1930s With other carriers she took part in the Pearl Harbor raid in December 1941 and the invasion of Rabaul in the Southwest Pacific in January 1942 The following month her aircraft participated in a combined carrier airstrike on Darwin Australia helping secure the conquest of the Dutch East Indies

Imperial Japanese Navy Aircraft Carriers 1921-45 Mark Stille, 2012-05-20 The Imperial Japanese Navy was a pioneer in naval aviation having commissioned the world's first built from the keel up carrier the Hosho Throughout the 1920s and 1930s it experimented with its carriers perfecting their design and construction As a result by the time Japan entered World War II and attacked the United States at Pearl Harbor in 1941 it possessed a fantastically effective naval aviation force This book covers the design development and operation of IJN aircraft carriers built prior to and during World War II Pearl Harbor Midway and the first carrier vs carrier battle the battle of the Coral Sea are all discussed

The Japanese Aircraft Carriers Sōryū and Hiryū Mirosław Skwiot, 2015 Sōryū meaning Blue or Green Dragon was an aircraft carrier built for the Imperial Japanese Navy IJN during the mid 1930s A sister ship Hiryū was intended to follow Sōryū but Hiryū's design was heavily modified and she is often considered to be a separate class Their aircraft supported the Japanese invasion of French Indochina in mid 1940 During the first month of the Pacific War they took part in the attack on Pearl Harbor and the Battle of Wake Island and then supported the conquest of the Dutch East Indies in January 1942 The following month their aircraft bombed Darwin Australia and continued to assist in the Dutch East Indies campaign In April Hiryū's aircraft helped sink two British heavy cruisers and several merchant ships during the Indian Ocean raid Hiryū was the second aircraft carrier included in The Second Naval Armaments Supplement Program of 1934 Originally both carriers were supposed to be sister vessels but the number of design modifications introduced during the construction of Sōryū resulted in many differences between the two According to the original plans Hiryū was to be completed a year after Sōryū but her construction similarly to her predecessor suffered delays caused by two key factors The first one was the implementation of the lessons learned during the reconstruction of Kaga which was going on simultaneously with Hiryū's construction Then there was new data available from the early service days of Sōryū which exposed some of the design's drawbacks and weaknesses The number of issues popping up along the way was further increased by the Fourth Fleet Incident and by Japan's withdrawal from the previously signed naval treaties Considering all those issues it is not hard to imagine the inevitable impact they had on Hiryu's original design and construction schedule. The greatest source of delays was undoubtedly the aftermath of the Fourth Fleet Incident which forced the Navy Aviation Bureau to introduce changes in the design of the second carrier. After the new requirements had been implemented, Hiryu's final design, known as the Basic Project G-10, finally emerged.

Japanese Heavy Cruiser Takao Waldemar Goralski, Mirosław Skwiot, 2010-07-01. Takao was the first of four Takao-class heavy cruisers designed to be an improvement over the previous Myōkō-class design. The Myōkō had proved to be unstable and required modifications which were incorporated into the Takao design. The Takao-class ships were approved under the 1927 fiscal year budget as part of the Imperial Japanese Navy's strategy of the Decisive Battle, forming the backbone of a multipurpose long-range strike force. Takao was built by the Yokosuka Naval shipyards and like her sister ships was named after a mountain. Launched on 12 May 1930 at the Yokosuka Navy Yard and commissioned on 31 May 1932, she was the lead ship of her class, assigned to the Pacific from the start of the war. In early 1942, Takao operated in the Java Sea in operations culminating in the Battle of the Java Sea in early March when one of Takao's floatplanes bombed the Dutch merchant ship Enggano. The next night, Takao and Atago overtook the old United States Navy destroyer Pillsbury and sank her with no survivors. Throughout the rest of the war, she was involved in various Pacific campaigns against the Allies.

Aircraft Carrier Victorious David Hobbs, 2018-09-30. The technical details of British warships were recorded in a set of plans produced by the builders on completion of every ship. Known as the as-fitted general arrangements, these drawings represented the exact appearance and fitting of the ship as it entered service. Intended to provide a permanent reference for the Admiralty and the dockyards, these highly detailed plans were drawn with exquisite skill in multi coloured inks and washes that represent the acme of the draughtsmans art Today they form part of the incomparable collection of the National Maritime Museum at Greenwich which is using the latest scanning technology to make digital copies of the highest quality This book is one of a series based entirely on these draughts which depict famous warships in an unprecedented degree of detail complete sets in full colour with many close ups and enlargements that make every aspect clear and comprehensible Extensive captions point the reader to important features to be found in the plans and an introduction covers the background to the design HMS Victorious was a ship with two almost separate incarnations as built in 1941 she was one of a new type of armoured carrier which saw strenuous wartime service post war the ship underwent a massive reconstruction lasting nearly eight years that saw her recommission in 1958 as one of the best equipped carriers in the world ready for another decade of duty Both these phases of the ships life are fully documented which allows this novel form of anatomy to cover two generations of carrier design
