The Voice of the Mother Jo Malin, 2000 Analyzing this narrative practice Malin examines ten texts by women who seem particularly compelled to tell their mothers stories Each author is in fact able to write her own autobiography only by using a narrative form that contains her mother's story at its core. These texts raise interesting questions about autobiography as a genre and about a feminist writing practice that resists and subverts the dominant literary tradition. Voices of Women

Writers Elena Anna Spagnuolo, 2023-10-10 This book investigates the practice of writing and self-translating phenomenon of self-translation within the context of mobility through the analysis of a corpus of narratives written by authors who were born in Italy and then moved to English-speaking countries. Emphasizing writing and self-translating as practices which exist in conjunction with a process of redefinition of identity, the book illustrates how these authors use language to negotiate and voice their identity in trans-migratory contexts. The Composer's Voice Edward T. Cone, 2021-01-08

Music we are often told is a language. But if music is a language, then who is speaking? The Composer's Voice tries to answer this obvious but infrequently raised question. In so doing, it puts forward a dramatic theory of musical expression based on the view that every composition is a symbolic utterance involving a fundamental act of impersonation. The voice we hear is not that of the composer himself but of a persona, a musical projection of his consciousness that experiences and communicates the events of the composition. Developing his argument by reference to numerous examples in a wide variety of styles, Mr. Cone moves from song and opera through program music to absolute instrumental music. In particular, he discusses the implications of his theory for performance. According to the dramatic view, not only every singer but every instrumentalist as well becomes a kind of actor, assuming a role that functions both autonomously and as a component of the total musical persona. In his analysis of the problems inherent in this dual nature of the performer's job, Mr. Cone offers guidance that will prove of practical value to every performing musician. He has much to say to the listener as well. He recommends an imaginative participation in the component roles of musical work leading to a sense of identification with the persona itself as the path to complete musical understanding. And this approach is shown to be relevant to a number of specialized kinds of listening as well as those applicable to analysis, historical scholarship, and criticism. The dance too is shown to depend on similar concepts. Although The Composer's Voice involves an investigation of how music functions as a form of communication, it is not primarily concerned with determining or interpreting the content of the message. A final chapter, however, puts forward a tentative explanation of musical meaning based on an interpretation of the art as a coalescence of symbolic utterance and symbolic gesture. While not essential to the main lines of the argument, it suggests interesting possibilities for further development of the dramatic theory. This title is part of UC Press's Voices Revived program, which commemorates University of California Press's mission to seek out and cultivate the brightest minds and give them voice, reach, and impact. Gedde-Dahl, Torodd Kinn, 2006-01-01 This book explores how the voices of authors and other researchers are manifested in academic discourse and how the author handles the polyphonic interaction between these various parties It represents a unique study of academic discourse in that it takes a doubly contrastive approach focusing on the two factors of discipline and language at the same time It is based on a large electronic corpus of 450 research articles from three disciplines economics linguistics and medicine in three languages English French and Norwegian The book investigates whether disciplines and languages may be said to represent different cultures with regard to person manifestation in the texts What is being studied is thus cultural identities as tendencies in linguistic practices For the majority of the features focused on e.g. metatext and bibliographical references the discipline factor turns out to contribute more strongly to the variation observed than the language factor However for some of the features e.g. pronouns and negation the language factor is also quite strong Additional background information on the investigations reported in this book can be found at www.uib.no/kiap Creativity
