The Army's Future Combat Systems Program And Alternatives:

The Army's Future Combat Systems Program and Alternatives, 2006 In today's environment of rapidly evolving conflicts the Army's goal is to have units that have the combat power of heavy units but that can be transported anywhere in the world in a matter of days To address concerns about the armored vehicle fleet's aging and the difficulties involved in transporting it as well as to equip the Army more suitably to conduct operations overseas on short notice using forces based in the United States the service created the Future Combat Systems FCS program in 2000 A major modernization effort the program is designed in part to develop and purchase vehicles to replace those now in the heavy forces the new vehicles would be much lighter thereby easing the deployment of units equipped with them In the analysis presented in this report the Congressional Budget Office CBO examined the current status of the Army's fleet of armored vehicles and assessed the speed of deployment of the service's heavy forces It also evaluated the FCS program considering the program's costs as well as its advantages and disadvantages and comparing it with several alternative plans for modernizing the Army's heavy forces

The Army's Future Combat Systems Program and Alternatives Congressional Budget Office, 2014-11-05 Roughly half of the Army's combat forces at the end of 2005 were so called heavy units forces that are equipped with armored vehicles and that provide significant firepower To support those units the Army maintains a fleet of approximately 28 000 armored vehicles Now that the Cold War is over some defense experts have questioned the relevance of such vehicles to the current national security strategy and their continued usefulness notwithstanding their contributions to recent operations such as Desert Storm and Iraqi Freedom The average age of the armored combat vehicle fleet at the end of 2005 was relatively high and the fleet comprises vehicles designed several decades ago Moreover units equipped with the vehicles in the current fleet are too large and too heavy to be moved overseas easily and quickly by the Air Force's C-17s the most numerous of its long range transport planes For all practical purposes heavy units must be transported overseas by ship a process that takes weeks In today's environment of rapidly evolving conflicts the Army's goal is to have units that have the combat power of heavy units but that can be transported anywhere in the world in a matter of days To address concerns about the armored vehicle fleet's aging and the difficulties involved in transporting it as well as to equip the Army more suitably to conduct operations overseas on short notice using forces based in the United States the service created the Future Combat Systems FCS program in 2000 A major modernization effort the program is designed in part to develop and purchase vehicles to replace those now in the heavy forces the new vehicles would be much lighter thereby easing the deployment of units equipped with them But the FCS program poised to develop a total of 18 new systems including eight manned vehicles to replace those in the Army's current armored fleet and a network to connect them all will not field any new vehicles until December 2014 at the earliest Furthermore because those new vehicles will be expensive the Army plans to buy relatively small quantities of them each year As a result the armored vehicles now in the Army s combat units will not all be replaced by FCS components until after 2035 a prospect that has evoked concerns about the costs of maintaining those older vehicles and upgrading them to prevent their becoming obsolete In addition questions have been raised about the FCS program s technical feasibility and affordability Some experts doubt that the Army can develop and test the necessary technologies in time to start producing lightweight manned vehicles by 2012 a requisite for meeting the deadline to field them according to the Army s current schedule Another concern is funding for the quantities of FCS equipment that the Army is now planning to buy Any reduction in the FCS procurement rate would force the Army to retain its already aging armored vehicles even longer and to invest more funds in their maintenance

Frances M. Lussier,2006-08 Analysis of the Army's Transformation Programs and Possible Alternatives Frances M. Lussier,2010 The Army has initiated two programs designed to transform itself from a force focused on fighting the Cold War to one better designed to face the challenges of the 21st century Those two programs the Modularity Initiative and the Future Combat Systems FCS program would change the way the Army is organized and equipped respectively This study considers the near and long term implications of those two programs It also examines three alternatives for modernizing the Army s combat forces using modified versions of the FCS program and estimates the costs and savings of those options as well as their effects on the Army s ability to introduce new technologies into its combat brigades An objective impartial analysis Charts and tables An Analysis of the Army's Transformation Programs and Possible Alternatives Frances M. Goldberg,2010-11 This testimony is an analyses of DoD s budget requests and preliminary projections for FY 2011 through 2028 Those projections are based in part on the President s 2010 budget request and budget justification materials the Admin provided to the Congress with that request Among the other sources consulted to supplement this analysis were DoD press releases and briefing materials and the Sec of Defense s announcement in April 2009 of changes to the nation s defense plans The long term demand for defense resources could be larger than the auditor s base projections The auditor estimates that supporting the number of deployed service members would require recurring annual appropriations of about 20 billion in 2010 dollars Illus CBO, Budget Options, Vol. 2, August 2009 ,2009
