Bromberg,2011-02-03 Patient reported outcome measures are central to the evaluation of medical care and treatment regimes Such measures depart from traditional clinical assessments as they are based on issues known to be of importance to patients This book outlines the development and application of a variety of such measures in a wide range of neurological conditions Introductory chapters outline issues in the application and validation of quality of life measures in neurology Subsequent chapters survey the most widely used quality of life instruments in Parkinson s disease motor neurone disease multiple sclerosis multiple system atrophy progressive supranuclear palsy and Alzheimer s dementia A chapter on cerebral palsy deals with the particular challenges to developing outcome measures for children The book also addresses issues relating to the translation of measures for use in cross cultural studies handling missing data carer experiences of long term conditions and methodological challenges Essential reading for clinicians and researchers working in the field of neurology Neuro-motor control and feed-forward models of locomotion in humans Marco Iosa, Nadia Dominici, Federica Tamburella, Leonardo Gizzi, 2015-07-29 Locomotion involves many different muscles and the need of controlling several degrees of freedom Despite the Central Nervous System can finely control the contraction of individual muscles emerging evidences indicate that strategies for the reduction of the complexity of movement and for compensating the sensorimotor delays may be adopted Experimental evidences in animal and lately human model led to the concept of a central pattern generator CPG which suggests that circuitry within the distal part of CNS i e spinal cord can generate the basic locomotor patterns even in the absence of sensory information Different studies pointed out the role of CPG in the control of locomotion as well as others investigated the neuroplasticity of CPG allowing for gait recovery after spinal cord lesion Literature was also focused on muscle synergies i e the combination of locomotor functional modules implemented in neuronal networks of the spinal cord generating specific motor output by imposing a specific timing structure and appropriate weightings to muscle activations Despite the great interest that this approach generated in the last years in the Scientific Community large areas of investigations remain available for further improvement e g the influence of afferent feedback and environmental constraints for both experimental and simulated models However also supraspinal structures are involved during locomotion and it has been shown that they are responsible for initiating and modifying the features of this basic rhythm for stabilising the upright walking and for coordinating movements in a dynamic changing environment Furthermore specific damages into spinal and supraspinal structures result in specific alterations of human locomotion as evident in subjects with brain injuries such as stroke brain trauma or people with cerebral palsy in people with death of dopaminergic neurons in the substantia nigra due to Parkinson s disease or in subjects with cerebellar dysfunctions such as patients with ataxia The role of cerebellum during locomotion has been shown to be related to coordination and adaptation of movements Cerebellum is the structure of CNS where are conceivably located the internal models that are neural representations miming meaningful aspects of our body such as input output characteristics of sensorimotor system Internal model control has been shown to be at the basis of motor strategies for compensating delays or lacks in sensorimotor feedbacks and some aspects of locomotion need predictive internal control especially for improving gait dynamic stability for avoiding obstacles or when sensory feedback is altered or lacking Furthermore despite internal model concepts are widespread in neuroscience and neurocognitive science neurorehabilitation paid far too little attention to the potential role of internal model control on gait recovery Many important scientists have contributed to this Research Topic with original studies computational studies and review articles focused on neural circuits and internal models involved in the control of human locomotion aiming at understanding the role played in control of locomotion of different neural circuits located at brain cerebellum and spinal cord levels Software Engineering: Effective Teaching and Learning Approaches and Practices Ellis, Heidi J.C.,Demurjian, Steven A.,Naveda, J.

Fernando,2008-10-31 Over the past decade software engineering has developed into a highly respected field Though computing and software engineering education continues to emerge as a prominent interest area of study few books specifically focus on software engineering education itself Software Engineering Effective Teaching and Learning Approaches and Practices presents the latest developments in software engineering education drawing contributions from over 20 software engineering educators from around the globe Encompassing areas such as student assessment and learning innovative teaching methods and educational technology this much needed book greatly enhances libraries with its unique research content

A Compendium of Neuropsychological Tests Esther Strauss,Elisabeth M. S. Sherman,Otfried Spreen,2006-04-06 For the practicing neuropsychologist or researcher keeping up with the sheer number of newly published or updated tests is a challenge as is evaluating the utility and psychometric properties of neuropsychological tests in a clinical context The goal of the third edition of A Compendium of Neuropsychological Tests a well established neuropsychology reference text is twofold First the Compendium is intended to serve as a guidebook that provides a comprehensive overview of the essential aspects of neuropsychological assessment practice Second it is intended as a comprehensive sourcebook of critical reviews of major neuropsychological assessment tools for the use by practicing clinicians and researchers Written in a comprehensive easy to read reference format and based on exhaustive review of research literature in neuropsychology neurology psychology and related disciplines the book covers topics such as basic aspects of neuropsychological assessment as well as the theoretical background norms and the utility reliability and validity of neuropsychological tests For this third edition all chapters have been extensively revised and updated The text has been considerably expanded to provide a comprehensive yet practical overview of the state of the field Two new chapters have been added Psychometrics in Neuropsychological Assessment and Norms in Psychological Assessment The first two chapters present basic psychometric concepts and principles Chapters three and four consider practical aspects of the history taking interview and the assessment process itself Chapter five provides guidelines on report writing and chapters six through sixteen consist of detailed critical reviews of neuropsychological tests and address the topics of intelligence achievement executive function attention memory language visual perception somatosensory olfactory function mood personality and response bias A unique feature is the inclusion of tables that summarize salient features of tests within each domain so that readers can easily compare measures Additional tables within each test review summarize important features of each test highlight aspects of each normative dataset and provide an overview of psychometric properties Of interest to neuropsychologists neurologists psychiatrists and educational and clinical psychologists working with adults as well as pediatric populations this volume will aid practitioners in selecting appropriate testing measures for their patients and will provide them with the knowledge needed to make empirically supported interpretations of test results A Clinician's Guide to Progressive Supranuclear Palsy Lawrence I.
