Writing as a Learning Activity

Perry Klein, Pietro Boscolo, Lori Kirkpatrick, Carmen Gelati, 2014-04-10. Writing as a learning activity offers an account of the potentials of writing as a tool for learning. Four aspects of writing emerge particularly clearly through the chapters: First, writing to learn depends on the cognitive strategies of the writer; instruction in such strategies contributes significantly to the ability to use writing as a learning tool. Secondly, strategies for writing and reasoning are largely specific to academic disciplines. Thirdly, writing is not as traditionally conceived, only an individual ability, but also an activity that is social. It is a collaborative practice facilitated by representational tools: books, computer notes, schemata, drawings, etc., by which knowledge is acquired, organized, and transformed at various levels of complexity. Fourthly, writing is a productive activity exemplified by the varied and positive effects of writing on learning different subjects at various educational levels.

Teaching Early Literacy

Diane M. Barone, Marla H. Mallette, Shelley Hong Xu, 2017-02-13. Grounded in cutting edge theory and research about literacy development, this book is filled with practical assessment and instructional ideas for teachers of pre-K through grade 3. Engaging vignettes show how everyday conversations and activities offer rich opportunities both for evaluating children's current level of knowledge and for helping them progress toward more sophisticated and rewarding interactions with reading and writing. Throughout the book, highlights ways to work effectively with English language learners and their families, a theme that is the exclusive focus of two chapters. Other timely topics covered include creative uses of technology and ways to incorporate popular culture into the classroom. Over two dozen reproducible assessment tools and handouts enhance the utility of this volume as an instructional resource, professional development tool, or graduate level text.
