marginalized groups in the US What People Believe When They Say That People Believe Todd Jones, 2010-10-26 In modern life we often hear people say things like Catholics don't believe in using birth control There are many reasons that we want to know what groups of people such as Catholics are thinking and doing But it's hard to understand which social situations are being described by such statements It's also difficult to understand what speakers believe when they make such statements even when the speakers are social scientists In this work cognitive scientist and philosopher Todd Jones looks at the different things that social scientists and ordinary speakers mean when they make statements ascribing beliefs or actions to groups rather than individuals Such statements are often denigrated as mere stereotypes or generalizations Yet they are also used by people to strategize about what actions to take and even for social scientific explanations In this work Jones takes a detailed look at the different things these kinds of statements about groups can mean and the various social structures they correspond to He also looks at how such statements can and can't be used to successfully explain the behavior of individuals or groups While many people broadly dismiss such statements about groups Jones gives a careful discussion of the problems and possibilities such statements have Making Nature Sacred John Gatta, 2004-10-14 Since colonial times the sense of encountering an unseen transcendental Presence within the natural world has been a characteristic motif in American literature and culture American writers have repeatedly perceived in nature something beyond itself and beyond themselves In this book John Gatta argues that the religious import of American environmental literature has yet to be fully recognized or understood Whatever their theology American writers have perennially construed the nonhuman world to be a source in Rachel Carson's words of something that takes us out of ourselves Making Nature Sacred explores how the quest for natural revelation has been pursued through successive phases of American literary and intellectual history And it shows how the imaginative challenge of reading landscapes has been influenced by biblical hermeneutics Though focused on adaptations of Judeo-Christian religious traditions it also samples Native American African American and Buddhist forms of ecospirituality It begins with Colonial New England writers such as Anne Bradstreet and Jonathan Edwards re-examines pivotal figures such as Henry Thoreau and John Muir and takes account of writings by Mary Austin Rachel Carson and many others along the way The book concludes with an assessment of the spiritual renaissance underway in current environmental writing as represented by five noteworthy poets and by authors such as Wendell Berry Annie Dillard Marilynne Robinson Peter Matthiessen and Barry Lopez This engaging study should appeal not only to students of literature but also to those interested in ethics and environmental studies religious studies and American cultural history

Be a Hero Wesley Campbell, Stephen Court, 2004 Be a Hero challenges the Body of Christ to be enlisted in the battle for mercy and social justice It opens with God's interaction in the affairs of men and His plan to redeem the invisible people through justice mercy and compassion Setting the stage theologically the authors then unveils the great exploits of those who have gone before us and the impact that they made in their own times and on their own culture Practical steps are offered to the reader to empower them to make a difference in their world

Taking a Part David Green, Maxine Green, 2000 Young people are a marginalized group They are often apart from the Church rather than a part of the Church The thought that young people might be able to help others in the Church in real and dynamic ways is rarely considered In an accessible and readable way the authors use theories from sociology psychology and anthropology to throw light on this key issue of participation in the Church Alongside the theory Taking A Part features thought provoking contributions from young people and youth workers who relate their experience of Church and offer successful examples of their own active contributions to Church life This is set within a theological context which draws on the biblical story of the talents Taking A Part continues the challenge to the Church of exploring new ways of building relationships with young people first brought to light in Youth A Part
