

Ocean Zones

The intertidal zone

is closest to shore. At high tide it is covered with water. At low tide, it is exposed to air. Living things must adapt to changing conditions and moving water in this zone.

The neritic zone

lies over the continental shelf. The water is not very deep. There are plenty of nutrients and sunlight. Many organisms live in this zone.

The oceanic zone

is the open ocean out past the continental shelf. The water may be very deep. Nutrients may be scarce. Fewer organisms live in this zone.

The photic zone

is the top 200 meters of water. This zone has enough sunlight for photosynthesis. That's why there are more living things here than in the aphotic zone.

The aphotic zone

is water below 200 meters. There isn't enough sunlight here for photosynthesis. Living things must eat whatever drifts down from above or each other. That's why there are fewer living things here than near the surface.

The benthic zone

is on the ocean floor. The ocean floor drops as you move away from the continents. There are fewer living things on the ocean floor where the water is very deep.

Elements of Dynamic Oceanography D. Tolmazin,2012-12-06 The ocean evokes the most romantic images of nature It is the eternally hostile element that has taken a heavy toll for every act of discovery sometimes in human lives No wonder there has always been a romantic aura about those who take to the sea be they pirates fishermen sailors the ocean itself have or even oceanographers Their exploits and provided ample food for thought and poetic inspiration Clearly man kind owes much to the ocean for the progress of civilization There is more to wresting the ocean's secrets from its depths than simply the excitement of struggling with the elements It is the thrill of ideas of discoveries made by scientific analysis of oceanic phenomena There have been quite a few renowned oceanographers who have never set foot aboard ship All they did was to use the general laws of fluid behavior and mathematical formulas as tools to study the ocean and to predict events Amazing armchair discoveries of currents and deep sea flows subsequently confirmed by observations at sea are fascinating What a scientist feels when uncovering the true behavior of oceanic phenomena in abstract columns of numbers in long and cumbersome or sometimes intriguingly simple mathematical relations is exhilaration My objective has been to bring this delightful esthetic pleasure within everyone's reach the outcome is this book It was about twelve years ago when I first
