

Lesson Plan for: The Three Little Pigs
Type of story: Folktale
Objectives:

- The students will be able to tell the story of the Three Little Pigs from memory.
- The students will learn about the typical plot of a simple folktale.
- The students will learn about a type of figure of speech called alliteration.

- Procedures:
1. Tell the story of “The Three Little Pigs” to the students.
 2. Check the students’ comprehension of the story by asking questions about it. Re-tell the story, or have the students read the story a second time.
 3. Read the definition of folktales to the students. Allow the students to talk about simple folk tales they are familiar with in addition to this one. Discuss the most common plot line for simple folktales: First, there are usually three main characters. Two of the them often have strength and good things going for them but are often flawed because they do not care for others, or are greedy, or who are more evil than good. The third character is often small or weaker, but has a good heart and is kind to others. A problem is introduced early in the story that the first two characters try to solve. Because they insult others or are unkind, or whatever, they are not able to solve the problem and are often punished. The third character (sometimes with the help of others that have been befriended) solves the problem and does well in the end.
 4. Discuss the plot of The Three Little Pigs, and compare it to other folk tales.
 5. Teach the students about alliterations. Alliteration is the repetition of a leading vowel or consonant sound in a phrase. A common example in English is “Peter Piper Picked a Peck of Pickled Peppers”. Alliteration can take the form of a vowel, or the repetition of a consonant. In this story, younger children love the phrase, “Not by the hair on my chinny chin chin!” They like repeated sounds like “Huff and Puff.” While it is not an alliteration, they enjoy the repeated sounds.

Social Studies Extensions – Research different types of houses that people live in and habitats that animals live in.

Language Arts/Writing Extension – Talk about parts of speech (nouns, pronouns, verbs, adjectives and adverbs). Take one English letter from the alphabet and list words that start with the letter. Ex: Nouns baby, ball, bed Verbs batted, belted, beat Adjectives beautiful, big ... Then have fun writing “alliteration sentences” with the words. The big beautiful baby bounced, beat and batted the ball around his bed.

Art Extension – Draw or make small models of the pig’s houses. Then re-tell the story using the art projects as “right-brain” assists (tools for helping right brained students) while telling the story.

Lotherington argues that in a globalized world, literacy must be reassessed on an international scale and multilingualism must be theorized and practiced as a component of multimodal literacy. Out of Turmoil Dean P. Vesperman, Anne Aydinian-Perry, Matthew T. Missias, Whitney G. Blankenship, 2023-01-01 It is not difficult to argue that the social sciences are in a period of transition. Our day-to-day lives have been marked by uncertainty as our social lives have vacillated wildly between highs and lows, tensions between fellow citizens have heightened along ideological fault lines, and educators have been placed squarely at the center of public discourses about what and how we should be teaching. By any measure, we are living in a time where every moment seems to be rife with high-stakes realities that must be navigated. Ladson Billings (2020) called on educators to reimagine education and contest the notion of a return to normal. In the current highly polarized context where we see multiple competing narratives rather than promoting a return to normal or business as usual, we argue that educators must use the lessons of the last two years as well as draw on what we have learned from history and the social sciences. By asking ourselves how we might interrogate and inform current social landscapes and the challenges that arise from them, we have the opportunity to take leadership in fostering innovation, building solidarity, and reimagining the teaching and learning of history and the social sciences. We recognize that humans live in multiple complex communities that include intersectional identities, relationships with power, agency, and discourses, and lived realities that are as unique as they are divergent. Consequently, the task of educators and the goal of this volume is to provide a clarion voice to a dynamic relational and undeniably human social world.

Transforming Storytimes Into Reading and Writing Lessons Annie Weissman, 2001 Lesson plans and examples will help you incorporate the national language arts standards covered by standardized tests and implement the Information Power II standards into your next storytime. Specific content areas and lesson plans are included and cover literary elements, Caldecott books, folk tales, genres, and nonfiction. Strategies like pair-share, Big Books, reader's theater, puppet shows, and choral responses encourage all students to participate and respond in storytime reading lessons, while brainstorming, composing, and publishing strategies encourage participation in storytime writing lessons. Students will always love storytime.
