Preservation Education Barry L. Stiefel, Jeremy C. Wells, 2014-09-02

Over the past twenty years there has been a fundamental shift in the institutional organization of historic preservation education. Historic preservation is the most recent arrival in the collection of built environment disciplines and therefore lacks the pedagogical depth and breadth found in allied endeavors such as architecture and planning. As the first degree programs in preservation only date to the 1970s and the first doctoral programs to the 1990s, new faculty are confronted with pedagogical challenges that are unique to this relatively nascent field. Based on a conference that included educators from around the world, Barry L. Stiefel and Jeremy C. Wells now present a collection that seeks to address fundamental issues of preservation pedagogy, outcome-based education and assessment, and global issues of authenticity and significance in historic preservation. The editors argue that the subject of the analysis has shifted from "What is the best way to fix a historic building" to "What are the best ways for teaching people how to preserve historic properties and why" according to the various standards that have been established. This important reconsideration of the state of the field in historic preservation education will appeal to a broad audience across numerous disciplines.

Crime and Planning Derek J. Paulsen, Ph.D., 2012-11-07. The form and layout of a built environment has a significant influence on crime by creating opportunities for it and in turn shaping community crime patterns. Effective urban planners and designers will consider crime when making planning and design decisions. A co-publication with the American Planning Association, Crime and Planning: Building Socially Sustainable Communities presents a comprehensive discussion of the interconnections between urban planning, criminal victimization, and crime prevention. An introduction into the main concerns at the intersection of criminology and community planning, the book first provides an overview of crime patterns. It then explores major issues within planning and their impact on crime. Critical topics discussed include connectivity, mixed-use developments, land use and zoning, transit-oriented design, and pedestrian trails, greenways, and parks. The remaining chapters explore crime prevention theories, crime prevention as a central component of sustainability, how to incorporate social sustainability and planning guidelines into local planning decisions, policy discussion of issues such as zoning, how tools such as smart growth and form-based codes relate to crime and crime prevention, examples of how planning decisions can impact crime patterns in both a residential and retail setting, and what has already worked in real-world communities. As communities continue to grapple with foreclosure, sprawl, and infill redevelopment, a sound understanding of how the built environment impacts crime is of increasing importance. This book provides planners with the tools and knowledge necessary to minimize the impact of crime on communities with the goal of creating socially sustainable communities.
