

INTERIOR CONTROLS AND OPERATIONS

Your new RV from Four Winds International offers virtually all the comforts of home while out on the road. These systems are of the most modern design available, just as the similar systems in your home, however, the RV's systems may be of different design, and construction than those found in your home.

The following instructions are for items inside the recreational vehicle which are general in nature. Instructions for the operation of appliances and conveniences not found here can be found in other sections dealing directly with appliances and systems. Check the index for the location of specific information.

LIVING QUARTERS

Construction of your Four Winds International RV is the best in the industry when it comes to strength and energy conservation. These new building techniques greatly reduce air exchange between the inside and outside, thus creating a very airtight vehicle.

This creates some problems than can easily be resolved by airing out the vehicle on a regular basis, especially in warm, humid conditions and after storage. Also, during prolonged cold weather where the heating system is in use, other procedures should be followed as detailed in the last suggestion in the Safety portion of this manual.

CONDENSATION

Condensation can be more of a problem in the well-built RV than in the average home. Bathing, dish washing, cooking, washing and drying clothes, and the use of unvented gas burners all contribute to the added moisture level.

A few easy procedures can help reduce the problem and include closing the door to the bathroom and opening the window vent during bathing and for a short period afterwards; using the overhead vent while cooking, and making sure the clothes dryer is vented to the outside of the unit. Also, don't hang wet clothing inside the RV to dry.

Taking care to keep down the amount of condensation will help prevent your unit's insulation from becoming damp and dropping its efficiency.

During the Summer always try to park in a site that will be shaded during the hottest part of the day. Window awnings are very helpful in keeping inside temperatures down.

Also, during hot weather, be aware that air conditioners need to operate on voltage of 110 to 120 and anything lower can result in overheating of the motor and excessive wear resulting in shorter life for the unit. Dim lights and a poor, narrow television picture are indicators of a low voltage source. Use a volt meter to check outside electrical sources.

WINDOWS

All the windows that open in the recreational vehicle are operated by sliding them back and forth. To operate, pivot the latch to release it from the locked position, and slide the window to open. When closing, slide the window fully closed, and pivot the latch back to the fully locked position. The screens will also slide open and closed if required for an emergency exit.

WARNING: To avoid exhaust gas entry into the motorhome, keep windows closed when the chassis or generator engines are running.

DOORS, DRAWERS AND STORAGE COMPARTMENTS

Cabinet and closet doors in the recreational vehicle have door fasteners, or pneumatic stops, which prevent them from accidentally opening during travel. Drawers throughout the recreational vehicle have travel stops which keep them from sliding out when in motion (under normal driving conditions).

To open drawers, lift up first, then slide out. When closing drawers make sure they drop slightly into the travel position.

Make sure before operating your recreational vehicle, that all cabinet doors and drawers are closed, and cabinet contents are secure. Retract and secure sliding doors in the bath area, as well as the bath door, to prevent noise and/or damage while traveling.

Under Sofa Storage (Some Models) — To access the available storage under the sofa by lifting the front seat section and pulling towards you. Do not lay seat down completely.
