

Speech of Self-Introduction Based on a Personal Object (4 minutes)

Due date: 07/06/10

Oral presentation 25 points – Outline 10 points

The speech should be delivered extemporaneously from brief notes on 4 x 6 index cards. It is important to establish eye contact 50% of the time. You may have 15 seconds forgiveness either side. Additionally, the speech outlines must follow the template provided with this assignment.

In preparation for this speech, select an object that represents a significant aspect of your cultural background, personality, values, ambitions, etc. Using the chosen object as a point of departure, you should develop a speech that explains how it relates to your life.

For example, a new father might select a cloth diaper as a vehicle for discussing his attitude as a parent. An avid tennis player might settle on a tennis racket to illustrate her passion about the sport and how it relates to the personal background.

If possible, you should bring the object of your speech to class on the day of the presentation. If this is not possible because the object is too large, too rare, or too valuable, you should bring in a model, drawing, or photograph of the object.

The purpose of this speech is not to explain the object in detail, but to use it as a vehicle for the speaker to introduce herself or himself to the class.

ORGANIZATIONAL GUIDELINES

- Speech must have an introduction, body, and conclusion (see outline)
- Speak from brief notes - not a manuscript. Eye contact with audience is vital.
- Practice your speech at least 5-7 times in front of a mirror or recording device before your date. You should know your time and get a feeling for the duration of the speech. Time and eye contact are very important for this assignment. Review your first taped speech to improve on identified areas.

Dynamics of Speech Production and Perception P.L. Divenyi, S. Greenberg, G. Meyer, 2006-09-20 The idea that speech is a dynamic process is a tautology whether from the standpoint of the talker the listener or the engineer speech is an action a sound or a signal continuously changing in time Yet because phonetics and speech science are offspring of classical phonology speech has been viewed as a sequence of discrete events positions of the articulatory apparatus waveform segments and phonemes Although this perspective has been mockingly referred to as beads on a string from the time of Henry Sweet s 19th century treatise almost up to our days specialists of speech science and speech technology have continued to conceptualize the speech signal as a sequence of static states interleaved with transitional elements reflecting the quasi continuous nature of vocal production This book a collection of papers of which each looks at speech as a dynamic process and highlights one of its particularities is dedicated to the memory of Ludmilla Andreevna Chistovich At the outset it was planned to be a Chistovich festschrift but sadly she passed away a few months before the book went to press The 24 chapters of this volume testify to the enormous influence that she and her colleagues have had over the four decades since the publication of their 1965 monograph

International Conference on Computer Applications - Telecommunications , Waveform Analysis of Sound Mikio Tohyama, 2015-01-10 What is this sound What does that sound indicate These are two questions frequently heard in daily conversation Sound results from the vibrations of elastic media and in daily life provides informative signals of events happening in the surrounding environment

In interpreting auditory sensations the human ear seems particularly good at extracting the signal signatures from sound waves. Although exploring auditory processing schemes may be beyond our capabilities, source signature analysis is a very attractive area in which signal processing schemes can be developed using mathematical expressions. This book is inspired by such processing schemes and is oriented to signature analysis of waveforms. Most of the examples in the book are taken from data of sound and vibrations; however, the methods and theories are mostly formulated using mathematical expressions rather than by acoustical interpretation. This book might therefore be attractive and informative for scientists, engineers, researchers, and graduate students who are interested in the mathematical representation of signals and the applications of Fourier analysis. The book can be described as being practically self-contained but does assume readers are familiar with introductory topics in discrete signal processing as in the discrete Fourier transform. Hence, this book might be also usable as a textbook in graduate courses in applied mathematics on topics such as complex functions. Almost all scientific phenomena are sensed as waves propagating in some space. Over the years, waveform analysis has therefore been one of the resilient academic areas of study and still is seen as fertile ground for development. In particular, waveform analysis based on the theory of linear systems would be a good example where a physical interpretation can be given to the mathematical theory of complex functions in terms of magnitude, angle, poles, and zeros of complex functions. For readers who are interested in the physical aspects of sound and vibration data or elementary formulation of wave equations and their solutions, the book Sound and Signals by M. Tohyama (Springer, 2011) is recommended. It can serve as a complementary companion to this present volume or independently as a good reference.
