Police Integrity in the Developing World Heath B. Grant,2018-10-11 This Brief explores the problem of creating organizational change and a culture of lawfulness within police organizations in the developing world In many countries where police are charged with responding to crime they are themselves entrenched in histories of corruption human rights abuses inefficiency as well as a lack of public trust While police corruption can happen anywhere areas of political transition tend to have a more entrenched cultural history of corruption. However, the author argues that even in the most challenged forces, there remains hope for organizational change. This brief demonstrates how understanding the local socio-political context and applying evidence-based best practices for police integrity training can bring about change. The brief summarizes the current state of knowledge on police integrity training strategies for rethinking corruption and community policing, as well as two case studies in Bangladesh and Mexico with applications for other regions. This work will be of interest to students and researchers in criminology and criminal justice, particularly with an interest in police studies and corruption, as well as related fields such as political science, international studies, and human rights.

The College Board Scholarship Handbook 2004 Joseph A. Russo, College Board, 2003-07-15 APLS GRANT 11 19 2003 26 95 United States Code, 2000 Edition, V. 24, Title 42, The Public Health and Welfare, Sections 7701-End , Training Police as Specialists in Family Crisis Intervention City University of New York. City College. Psychological Center, Morton Bard, 1970. This training was intended to demonstrate innovative methods of crime prevention and preventive mental health. Processing family disturbances constitutes a major aspect of police work. Traditional police approaches to the problem do not reflect the realities of this police experience. There is evidence that a significant proportion of injuries and fatalities suffered by police occur in the highly volatile family conflict situation. The present project attempted to modify family assaults and family homicides and to reduce personal danger to police officers in such situations. The project attempted the development of a new preventive mental health strategy. Assuming that family conflict may be an early sign of emotional disorder in one or all of the participants, the project attempted to utilize policemen as front-line casefinders in keeping with theories of primary prevention. It was proposed that selected policemen could be provided with interpersonal skills necessary to effect constructive outcomes in deteriorating situations which require police intervention. Rejection of an exclusively specialized role for the police officers involved was a major emphasis. The program avoided the conversion of policemen into social workers or psychotherapists. The officers were expected to perform all generalized police patrol functions but were the individuals dispatched on all family disputes in a given geographical area. In addition to continuous group experience, each family specialist was assigned an individual consultant for at least one hour weekly consultation. The individual consultants were advanced clinical psychology students who acquired in this way an unusual community consultation experience. The reciprocal effect of these encounters on the students and upon the policemen is self-evident.
