

A quoted piece of text that looks like a DATE7. or DATE9. formatted date with an attached letter d (or D) is a SAS date constant. It is a numeric value that contains the number of days between 01/Jan/1960 and the specified date. _

10. The following SAS program is submitted:

```
data work.report;
  set work.sales;
  if qtr(sales_date) GT 2;
run;
```

The SAS data set Work.Sales has 1 observation for each month in the year 2007, and the variable Sales_Date contains a SAS date value for each of the 12 months. How many of the original 12 observations in Work.Sales are written to the Work.Report data set?

- a. 2
- b. 3
- c. 6
- d. 9

Correct answer: c

The observations for the second half of the year will end up in the Work.Report data set. Given that there is only 1 observation per month in the data set Work.Sales, the new data set will only have 6 observations in it.

11. The following SAS program is submitted:

```
data last_sale;
  set sales <insert option here> = x;
  if x=1 then output;
run;
```

Which of the following options should be used in the DATA step to create a data set called Last_Sale that contains the last observation in Sales?

- a. END
- b. NOBS
- c. LASTOBS
- d. _N_

Correct answer: a

The required option in this case is END=. The user-named variable is numeric, automatically dropped, has the value 0 for observations read in that are not the final observation, and a value of 1 if the observation is the last being read into the DATA step.
