

The Cell Cycle

What controls the life and development of a cell?

why?

An old piece of poetry says "to everything there is a season... a time to be born, a time to die." For cells, the line might say "a time to divide and a time to grow." In multicellular organisms, different types of cells have different roles and need to complete specific tasks. For example, a cell that isn't large enough is not useful for storing nutrients for later, but a cell that is too large will not be useful for transportation through a tiny capillary. In this activity, you will learn about the seasons of a cell's life, and in turn better understand how organisms function.

Model 1 - The cell cycle

1. How many phases are in the cell cycle as shown in the diagram in Model 1?

Four.

2. Starting at the starred cell, what is the order of the stages of a cell's life?

1' 2'

3. During which phase does the size of the cell increase?

4. During which phase does the number of cells increase?

M.

5. Considering your answer to Questions 3 and 4, identify two ways that the growth of an organism can be accomplished through the events of the cell cycle.

Growth can happen when cells increase in size or when the number of cells in an organism increases (this takes place during G1 and M, respectively).

A Strategy for Research in Space Biology and Medicine in the New Century National Research Council,Division on Engineering and Physical Sciences,Space Studies Board,Committee on Space Biology and Medicine,1998-09-16 Construction of the international space station scheduled to start in late 1998 ushers in a new era for laboratory sciences in space This is especially true for space life sciences which include not only the use of low gravity as an experimental parameter to study fundamental biological processes but also the study of the serious physiological changes that occur in astronauts as they remain in space for increasingly longer missions This book addresses both of these aspects and provides a comprehensive review of ground based and space research in eleven disciplines ranging from bone physiology to plant biology It also offers detailed prioritized recommendations for research during the next decade which are expected to have a considerable impact on the direction of NASA s research program The volume is also a valuable reference tool for space and life scientists

Radiation Hazards to Crews of Interplanetary Missions Task Group on the Biological Effects of Space Radiation,Commission on Physical Sciences, Mathematics, and Applications,Space Studies Board,Division on Engineering and Physical Sciences,National Research Council,1997-03-13 NASA s long range plans include possible human exploratory missions to the moon and Mars within the next quarter century Such missions beyond low Earth orbit will expose crews to transient radiation from solar particle events as well as continuous high energy galactic cosmic rays ranging from energetic protons with low mean linear energy transfer LET to nuclei with high atomic numbers high energies and high LET Because the radiation levels in space are high and the missions long adequate shielding is needed to minimize the deleterious health effects of exposure to radiation The knowledge base needed to design shielding involves two sets of factors each with quantitative uncertainty the radiation spectra and doses present behind different types of shielding and the effects of the doses on relevant biological systems It is only prudent to design shielding that will protect the crew of spacecraft exposed to predicted high but uncertain levels of radiation and biological effects Because of the uncertainties regarding the degree and type of radiation protection needed a requirement for shielding to protect against large deleterious but uncertain biological effects may be imposed which in turn could result in an unacceptable cost to a mission It therefore is of interest to reduce these uncertainties in biological effects and shielding requirements for reasons of mission feasibility safety and cost
