

3.4.2 Construction

Construction should be in accordance with the Standard Drawings provided with this document.

3.5 Building Drainage

Requirements for building drainage are applicable to domestic buildings or small non-domestic buildings. Systems are generally located within the building and above ground level, unless the building has a basement. Complex systems in larger buildings should be designed to BS EN 12056.

Building drainage of basement and ground floor shall employ a twin pipe system for separate discharge of soil and waste flows to foul sewage manholes, as shown below:

Source of Discharge	System to which Discharge is to be made
Toilet, urinals	Soil
Bidet	Soil
Wash basin, bath, shower	Waste
Kitchen	Waste

Building drainage of first floors and above shall employ a single pipe system.

Swimming Pools: To prevent flooding of the sewerage system the discharge from swimming pools shall be limited to a maximum flow rate of 10 l/s. Positive means of flow control shall be provided such as a sharp edge orifice plate (50-60mm), a locked flow control valve or a small diameter pipe (e.g 50mm x 3m long or 75mm x 10m long). As the flow control will be dependent upon the particulars of the swimming pool installation the developer shall provide calculations to demonstrate the design of the flow control device.

3.5.1 Construction

All sewerage and waste discharge pipes inside the building as far as the manhole should be PVC-U (unplasticised polyvinyl chloride) to BS 4660 and EN1401-1 with push-fit joints incorporating elastomeric sealing rings to provide flexibility at joints.

Constructing pipelines below building should be avoided where possible. Where unavoidable the design shall ensure that neither the structural integrity of the pipeline or the building is compromised.

Pipeline trenches should not be excavated lower than the foundations of the building unless concrete bedding and surround are used to the lowest level of the building foundation.
