

Remote Method Invocation

Abstract—Recently The Java Remote Method Invocation (RMI) system allows an object running in one Java virtual machine to invoke methods on an object running in another Java virtual machine. RMI provides for remote communication between programs written in the Java programming language.

I. INTRODUCTION

The RMI Java Remote Method Invocation Application Programming Interface (API), or Java RMI, is a Java API that performs the object-oriented equivalent of remote procedure calls (RPC), with support for direct transfer of serialized Java objects and distributed garbage collection.

The original implementation depends on Java Virtual Machine (JVM) class representation mechanisms and in that only supports making calls from one JVM to another. The protocol underlying this Java-only implementation is known as Java Remote Method Protocol (JRMP).

- In order to support code running in a non-JVM context, a CORBA version was later developed.
- In order to support code running in a non-JVM context, a CORBA version was later developed.

II. WHAT IS RMI?

Remote Method Invocation is a mechanism that allows object to interact which are located in different computer in different network. RMI is a package for writing, executing Java program. Provides framework for developing & running servers. A true distributed computing application interface for Java, written to provide easy access to objects existing on remote virtual machines. Helps provide access to objects existing on remote virtual machines. Remote objects can be treated similarly to local objects. Handles marshaling, transportation, and garbage collection of the remote objects. Became part of the JDK with version 1.1

III. WHAT IS RMI NOT?

Not an all-purpose ORB architecture like CORBA and DCOM. Not language independent. Limited only to Java. Interfaces to remote objects are defined using ordinary Java interfaces (rather than having to use a special purpose interface definition language). Can provide more advanced features like serialization and security.

IV. WHAT IS JAVA RMI?

JAVA RMI hides all the aspects of d.a. & provides a uniform way by which object can be access. Java Remote Method Invocation (Java RMI) enables the programmer to create distributed Java technology-based or Java technology-based applications, in which the methods of remote Java objects can be invoked from other Java virtual machines, possibly on different hosts. RMI uses object serialization to marshal and marshal parameters and data, not primitive types, supporting true object-oriented polymorphism. Java RMI is included with Java SE and is available as a separate download for Java ME. Fig. RMIServer.java provide methods `string getid()`, `void get(x)`.

- client may use 2 methods for retrieving & storing a string to it.
- client may modify & inspect local state of server object.

V. RMI IS IMPLEMENTATION AS THREE LAYERS:

A stub program in the client side of the client/server relationship, and a corresponding skeleton at the server end. The stub appears to the calling program to be the program being called for a service. (then uses the term proxy as a synonym for stub.)

A Remote Reference Layer that can behave differently depending on the parameters passed by the calling
