

Quantitative Research Critique Paper Example Essay

Introduction

Critiquing is a skill used in Nursing and other disciplines to closely look at a particular study in details. The skill tries to evaluate the work of that particular discipline, and then from the approaches used in analyzing the research being examined, the expert analyzing the work is able to conclude that the analysis is of merit or demerit to the users. The critiquing quantitative skills, try to analyze the merit that a research employed in gathering their numerical data. The data analyzed can be in form of weights or mass, or length, volume, etc. On the other hand, the qualitative sample described by the writer is also looked into to affirm their strengths and weakness. (Ryan, Coughlan & Cronin 2007)

The case study of this research uses the different leading statement to find out the following statement of the problem from the articles of Nursing; was the critical points addressed by the two articles? Were their new ideas in the two articles, were their elaborate recommendations, was their room given in the two articles for the two types of research.

QUANTITATIVE RESEARCH CRITIQUE

Research Problem and Purpose

The purpose of the BMC Geriatrics is to realize the psychosocial needs of the people with mental problems. It, therefore, offers a qualitative approach to the problem in relation to different believes and activities in a healthcare provider. On the other hand, the Journal of Nursing UFPE online is written to give the prevention measures of urinary infections. It uses the qualitative approach as an indicator of nursing aid to the aging group.

Hypotheses and Research Questions

In the article of prevention of urinary infection; the following information can be obtained from them, first, the journal clearly states it objectively which is basically the ways in which the article can be helpful to people with the urinary infection. On the other hand, the article of the BMC Geriatrics tries to find out away in which the persons with the mental problem can regain his or her normal social live hood. Secondly, the article of prevention measure of urinary infection give the give the find of 256 patients that were examined in a hospital under the nurse's care and the result tabulated on page 3154. On the other hand the BMC on stated their findings and elaborated them, for example, the finding of the physical need oriented logics, the renouncement logics among other elaborated. The articles are therefore useful for their targeted group it is only that the one giving preventive measure is very precise to the points while the one BMC is very elaborate.
