Quarantine Jim Crace, 2015-06-18 Winner of the Whitbread Novel Award Shortlisted for the Booker Prize Dazzling gritty brilliance Sunday Times Completely captivating Literary Review Jim Crace's provocative retelling of Jesus forty day fast in the desert is a classic that tampers with tradition Moving and fascinating in equal measure Quarantine is a stunningly realized novel from one of the great writers of our time Under an endless and unforgiving sky five travellers venture into the Judean wilderness in search of redemption Instead amidst the barren rocks they are met by a dangerous man Musa and fall under his dark influence As the unforgiving days and bitter nights erode their resolve it becomes clear that one among them will go further than the rest a fervent solitary figure he denies the temptations of his neighbours and ultimately the needs of his own body One of the finest novels I've read in years The Times Crace's desert shimmers with a sense of the miraculous Express on Sunday Stunning A writer of hallucinatory skill John Updike Part of the Picador Collection a series showcasing the best of modern literature

The Déjà-vu and the Authentic Jean-Jacques Chardin, 2012-04-25 The correlated concepts of the déjà vu and the authentic suggest that all cultural productions are per se palimpsests whose construction is the result of such processes as reprise recycling and recuperating Reprise is approached as various forms of citation reference and intertextuality recycling is defined as commodification and intellectual impoverishment while recuperating implies the ideological process that makes reappropriation possible By covering a wide spectrum of research interests from literature to music art and the cinema the seventeen contributions in English or in French explore the political and ethical implications inherent in the creation of culture
