Economic Growth and Sustainable Housing Jin Xue, 2013-08-15 Economic Growth and Sustainable Housing An Uneasy Relationship critically discusses the possibilities of decoupling environmental degradation from economic growth The author refutes the belief in combining perpetual economic growth with long term environmental sustainability based on the premise that economic growth can be fully decoupled from negative environmental impacts This proposition is underpinned by intensive study in the housing sector from both theoretical and empirical perspectives Xue employs critical realism to inform the investigation and organize the argumentation throughout the book The book is organised into four parts the first discusses the relevance of critical realism to the research field of housing and urban sustainable development in terms of ontology and methodology The second makes a transcendental refutation of the possibilities of decoupling economic growth from housing related environmental impacts by describing transfactual conditions of full decoupling The third part presents two case studies to show whether and to what extents decoupling between economic growth and housing related environmental impacts have historically taken place Inspired by critical realist ontology generalization of abstract concept from the case studies are made to cast light on the implausibility of maintaining perpetual economic growth through decoupling The final part explains why and how the belief in full decoupling and economic growth is generated and sustained despite its implausibility and non necessity which constitutes an explanatory critique of the growth and decoupling ideology and paves the way for the paradigm shift to socially sustainable de growth This book will be of interest to students of housing and urban studies to students of environmental sustainability and also for those students and academics with a general interest in critical realism

State Structure, Policy Formation, and Economic Development in Southeast Asia Antoinette R. Raquiza, 2013-06-17 Why do some small developing countries industrialize and others don t What factors account for different economic performance among states that are vulnerable to external shocks crony capitalism and political instability This book argues that the answer lies in the structuring of state power specifically the way different sets of governing elites political leaders and economic technocrats are embedded in political organisations and state institutions and the way these elites relate to each other in the economic development policy process Conducting a comparative historical analysis of Thailand and the Philippines the book argues that the institutional settings of governing elites influence economic outcomes In Thailand political power traditionally connects to state institutions in ways that has limited the impact of political turnovers and global downturns conducive to long term industrial activities In contrast Philippine state power derives from family networks that merge social and political power suited to fast moving short term commercial interests In focusing on this political and institutional story the author analyses the current development dilemmas of countries weighed down by historical legacies of unstable regimes dependency and social conflict and how they are likely to develop in the future

Congressional Record United States. Congress,1999 Japan and a New World Economic Order Kyoshi Kojima,2010-11 President Nixon s new economic policy of August 1971 aggravated by the oil problem since October 1973 caused chaos and uncertainty in the international trade and currency system There were fears of another 1930s style depression In addition a world food shortage and strident claims by developing countries for perpetual sovereignty over resources added another set of difficulties This volume written from Japan s standpoint suggests a new direction for the world and regional economic order The book tackles two major issues in international economics Firstly traditional international trade theory aims only at static maximization in the use of world human and material resources but the author stresses more attention should be paid to such dynamic or developmental elements as population growth immigration natural resource development improvement in transfer of technology economies of scale direct foreign investment and economic integration in order to create development centres or sectors in the world economy Secondly the author discusses how to combine a global and regional approach to economic integration Resources in Education ,1996-04 Energy Research Abstracts ,1978 Science, technology and innovation policies for inclusive growth in Africa : human skills development and country cases LIT Verlag,2020-01-01 The volume analyses major strategic and policy issues How to make Science Technology and Innovation STI Policies relevant for inclusive growth strategies in Africa so that socio economic transformation strategies will take off The first part discusses the issues of human skills development as part of STI policies based on visions strategic plans and country cases for Cameroon Nigeria and Mauritania The second part looks at STI Policies for Economic Transformation focussing on country case studies for Egypt and Tunisia A third part presents book reviews and book notes Compendium of Research Contracts and Reports United States.
