Practice Examination Questions for Diagnosis in Traditional Chinese Medicine Shaozhi Li, Xiaohong Tan, 2003-12-01 Any kind of TCM therapeutic method which you offer to your patient is based on your skills of syndrome differentiation It is important for TCM students to obtain the basic knowledge and skill of diagnosis in their limited time especially for those 2nd or 3rd year students who are facing the NCCAOM tests in order to get their acupuncture license in the United States Diagnosis is one of the most crucial aspects of the NCCAOM tests It is difficult to imagine one who does not understand diagnosis very well would be able to pass the board examinations or be competent enough to serve his or her community The purpose of this book is to help students review TCM diagnosis and grasp the keywords for syndrome differentiation by doing practical questions Based on more than 15 years experience in teaching TCM diagnosis in both China and United States the authors have created more than 1800 diagnostic questions which were used for their students to prepare for NCCAOM examinations The questions got very good feedback from their students who took the NCCAOM tests No doubt it is a good book for students who prepare for both the acupuncture and herbology examinations of the NCCAOM The authors are grateful to their students the Texas College of Traditional Chinese Medicine the Florida Institute of Traditional Chinese medicine and the Hunan College of Traditional Chinese medicine It would have been impossible to write the book without their encouragement and support
