In this assignment you will have an opportunity to:

- a. Integrate design mass balance relationships with mass balances on thickening, dewatering and recovery objectives processes.

A 2.4% centrifuge is being considered for dewatering digested sludge. The feed contains wet solids streams are provided and the following information is available for each sample stream collected. Determine the solids capture that is being achieved with this centrifuge.

Sample	Initial mass (g)	Mass after drying (g)
Feed	500	314
Centrate	1000	81
Sludge	200	142

Use the following mass:

$$\text{Feed} = 500 \text{ g} \rightarrow 50 \text{ kg}$$

$$\text{Sludge} = 200 \text{ g} \rightarrow 20 \text{ kg}$$

$$\text{Centrate} = 1000 \text{ g} \rightarrow 100 \text{ kg}$$

$$\text{W} = \frac{\text{mass of solids}}{\text{mass of water}} = \frac{\text{mass of solids}}{\text{mass of water}} = 60 \text{ dry}$$

Physicochemical Treatment Processes Lawrence K. Wang, Yung-Tse Hung, Nazih K. Shammam, 2005-03-11 The past 30 years have seen the emergence of a growing desire worldwide to take positive actions to restore and protect the environment from the degrading effects of all forms of pollution air noise solid waste and water Because pollution is a direct or indirect consequence of waste the seemingly idealistic demand for zero discharge can be construed as an unrealistic demand for zero waste However as long as waste exists we can only attempt to abate the subsequent pollution by converting it to a less noxious form Three major questions usually arise when a particular type of pollution has been identified 1 How serious is the pollution 2 Is the technology to abate it available and 3 Do the costs of abatement justify the degree of abatement achieved The principal intention of the Handbook of Environmental Engineering series is to help readers formulate answers to the last two questions The traditional approach of applying tried and true solutions to specific pollution problems has been a major contributing factor to the success of environmental engineering and has accounted in large measure for the establishment of a methodology of pollution control. However, realization of the ever increasing complexity and interrelated nature of current environmental problems makes it imperative that intelligent planning of pollution abatement systems be undertaken.

Handbook of Downstream Processing E. Goldberg, 2012-12-06

The last two decades have seen a phenomenal growth of the field of genetic or biochemical engineering and have witnessed the development and ultimately marketing of a variety of products typically through the manipulation and growth of different types of microorganisms followed by the recovery and purification of the associated products. The engineers and biotechnologists who are involved in the full scale process design of such facilities must be familiar with the variety of unit operations and equipment and the applicable regulatory requirements. This book describes current commercial practice and will be useful to those engineers working in this field in the design, construction and operation of pharmaceutical and biotechnology plants. It will be of help to the chemical or pharmaceutical engineer who is developing a plant design and who faces issues such as: Should the process be batch or continuous or a combination of batch and continuous? How should the optimum process design be developed? Should one employ a new revolutionary separation which could be potentially difficult to validate or use accepted technology which involves less risk? Should the process be run with ingredients formulated from water for injection, deionized water or even filtered tap water? Should any of the separations be run in cold rooms or in glycol jacketed lines to minimize microbial growth where sterilization is not possible? Should the process equipment and lines be designed to be sterilized in place, cleaned in place or should every piece be broken down, cleaned and autoclaved after every turn?
