

13. Bring out the importance of animal husbandry, fisheries and horticulture as a source of diversification.

Animal Husbandry

Animal husbandry contributes to non-farm employment in a significant way. Rural families opt for rearing and sale of cattle, poultry in addition to farming. The farmers living in semi-arid and arid areas are mostly involved in livestock farming. In India approximately 70 million people are earning their income through livestock farming. The most important products obtained from livestock farming are milk, meat and eggs and also by products like skin which can be used to make leather items.

Fisheries

Fisheries form an important source of income for states in the coastal region such as Maharashtra, Kerala, Gujarat, Andhra Pradesh and Tamil Nadu. Fishing is primarily based on inland water bodies like river, ponds, fisheries and marine water bodies such as sea. Funds have been allotted to this sector for improving the production. Still this segment has not contributed much towards GDP.

Horticulture

Horticulture is also one of the most important source of livelihood in rural India. This includes fruits, vegetables, aromatic plants, flowers and medicinal plants. India is the second largest producer of fruits and vegetables. Rise of income levels have been witnessed in families engaged in horticulture. Horticulture generates around 19% of the total labour force in India.

14. 'Information technology plays a very significant role in achieving sustainable development and food security' — comment.

Information technology (IT) plays a significant role in agriculture and helps in achieving sustainable development. It enables data storage associated to past and future conditions providing vital inputs for making decision and also for taking various corrective measures necessary for improvement of crop production. Weather and soil conditions can be determined with the help of information technology for improving crop productivity, and as such if there is a chance of crop failure, it can be prevented using the information obtained from IT. It is possible for farmers to connect to Kishan Call Centers for any doubt regarding agriculture. It also helps in generating employment in rural areas in form of kiosks. These kiosks serve as the source of information for improving productivity, better land usage, fertilisers, quality of seeds and other modern techniques that are required for agriculture. Hence we can say that agriculture plays significant role in achieving sustainable development.
