Negotiating Gendered Identities in Primary School Jon Swain, 2024-11-30 This open access book explores young children's lives in their later years at primary school from their own point of view. The author interrogates how children make meanings of who they think they are, what it means to be a girl or a boy, and what forms of femininity and masculinity are most dominant. Findings are based on interviews conducted at a middle-class state school and a fee-paying preparatory school on the outskirts of London.
