

ESSAY WRITING

Introduction:

What makes an essay different from other forms of writing? When you write an essay, you are invited, in fact commanded, to state your opinion (thesis). Of course, once you have stated your opinion, you are also required to back up your opinion with facts. A well-written essay has an opinion that is supported by the body of the essay and then leads naturally to a conclusion.

So, why do so many students find it hard to write essays? Many students know how to do research - find facts through other sources and tell them back in their own words. While formal research papers do require a thesis, this is more factual in nature.

Other students love to write creatively. They like to make up characters and take them on an adventure. They love to express themselves through the use of their imagination.

Research writing meets creative writing = essay writing. Writing an essay requires a student to use facts and personal experience to persuade a person that their viewpoint has merit. This requires a student to use their creativity in a way that makes sense logically. This is an abstract way of thinking that causes anxiety for many, but it can be fun.

In this course, we will try to find some fun and creative ways to learn the basic format of essay-writing. We will try to have the support for our thesis make sense and be logical. We are going to stick to some very basic topics, so that students can concentrate on the format and support, without attempting to learn about new things.

You can use this curriculum on your computer (rather than printing) and write the answers on a separate sheet of paper. Essays will probably be typed - this makes editing and revising so much easier. My personal preference is to print on 3-hole paper (or punch the holes after you print), placing the entire curriculum in a small 3-ring binder. Essays (rough drafts and final copies) can be printed and placed at the appropriate section of the binder. The feeling of accomplishment is priceless when you can go back and look at what you have completed!

I allow my students two weeks to re-write an essay (using the comments & rubric to make changes) with no loss of points. The goal of a writing class is to help students write, so this encourages them to revise and get a better grade! Rubrics are included in the answer key, but feel free to create your own.

Have fun!
