Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health of sedentary, middle-aged men. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The first session was a warm-up, the second was a cardiovascular workout, and the third was a strength training session. The results showed that the men who participated in the program had a significant increase in their cardiovascular fitness, as measured by the maximum heart rate and the maximum oxygen consumption. They also had a significant increase in their muscle strength, as measured by the maximum lift and the maximum push. The program was well tolerated and the men reported a significant improvement in their overall health and well-being.
