Why The Kyoto Report Is A Failure:

Climate Change Policy Failures: Why Conventional Mitigation Approaches Cannot Succeed Howard A Latin, 2012-05-14

At the recent UN Climate Change Conferences in Copenhagen Cancun and Durban the developed nations promised hundreds of billions of dollars in financial aid to help developing countries overcome global climate change dangers The developed nations will need to spend many more billions to limit their own greenhouse gas pollution the main cause of global warming and climate change Will all this money and effort be wasted This book argues that nearly all of the world's climate policy makers and expert advisors have been making tragic mistakes that ensure the failures of climate change mitigation attempts The great majority of climate change programs from American congressional bills to cap and trade economic incentive schemes to the Kyoto Protocol and other international treaties rely on greenhouse gas emissions reduction targets that will prove too little too late by deferring strict pollution controls too far into the future The inadequate emissions reduction measures also will not be able to bridge the gap between the highest priorities of developed and developing nations Vast discharges of greenhouse gases authorized by weak emissions reduction programs in the next several decades virtually guarantee that the cumulative concentration of greenhouse gases in the atmosphere will keep increasing while climate change continues to grow worse Rather than adopting ineffectual emissions reduction programs that cannot limit the cumulative concentration of greenhouse gases in the air this book proposes a shift to a clean technology replacement strategy that could support current lifestyles and expanding economic development without further damaging our climate The only way to reduce the greenhouse gas levels in the atmosphere enough to decrease climate change hazards is to replace large pollution sources as rapidly as feasible in as many industrial sectors and geographic regions as possible with clean alternative technologies processes and methods

Why REDD will Fail Jessica DeShazo, Chandra Pandey, Zachary A. Smith, 2016-02-05 Reducing Emissions from Deforestation and forest Degradation REDD attempts to address climate change from one angle by paying developing countries to slow or stop deforestation and forest degradation Trumpeted as a way to both mitigate climate change and assist countries with development REDD was presented as a win win solution However there have been few attempts to understand and analyse the overall framework Why REDD Will Fail argues that the important goals will not be met under the existing REDD regime unless the actual drivers of deforestation and forest degradation are diminished The book delves into the problematic details of the regime ranging from national capacity to monitor results the funding mechanism the definition of a forest leakage and the impetus behind the drivers of deforestation and forest degradation As the international community rallies around REDD and developed countries and companies are willing to commit substantial amounts to implement the scheme this book seeks to address whether REDD has the potential to achieve its purported goals This is an important resource for academics and students interested in the policy and management aspects of mitigating climate change environmental policy international relations and development studies as well as policy makers involved in the REDD process      The Regulation of the Global Water Services Market Julien Chaisse, 2017-01-26 Fragmentation in Water Policies in the Riparian ASEAN Member States      The Failures of American and European Climate Policy Loren R. Cass, 2006-01-01 Examines why some nations but not others have met their commitments to international climate treaties      A Relational Approach to Governing Wicked Problems Peeter Selg, Georg Sootla, Benjamin Klasche, 2023-12-13 The book initiates a relational turn in policy making and governance by developing further relational political analysis and by taking relational thinking to bear on not just analytic descriptive issues but also to normative prescriptive issues The need for such a turn this book argues comes from the ever increasing relevance of addressing the so called wicked problems of governance like climate change COVID 19 kinds of pandemics global economic recessions and refugee crises The book argues for a need to rethink governance as a process from the relational point of view to spur its potential for addressing these problems What needs to be rethought is not so much the specific tools or resources of governance but the very issue of whether governance should be seen in terms of tools and resources in the first place This book contributes to this discussion by consolidating the relational approaches to governance thus far and by taking them to a next normative prescriptive level      Why We Disagree about Climate Change Mike Hulme, 2009-04-30 A unique insider's account of climate change and the diverse ways in which it is understood      Fisheries Regulation in the Central Arctic Ocean Lena J. Haas, 2024-12-30 The 2018 Agreement to Prevent Unregulated High Seas Fisheries in the Central Arctic Ocean CAOFA Agreement is a unique international treaty It sets up conditions for potential future commercial fisheries in the central Arctic Ocean furthered by climate change until ecosystem dynamics are well understood As a product of balancing interests of various stakeholders after a multi year drafting process the agreement protects both fish stocks and the environment Based on international maritime law scientific research and principles of international environmental law such as the precautionary approach it sets a precedent for future fisheries agreements      Reason in a Dark Time Dale Jamieson, 2014-04 From the 1992 Rio Earth Summit to the 2009 Copenhagen Climate Conference there was a concerted international effort to stop climate change This book is about what climate change is why we failed to stop it and why it still matters what we do      The Lisbon Strategy: Which failure? Moral Movements and Foreign Policy Joshua W. Busby,2010-07-29 Why do advocacy campaigns succeed in some cases but fail in others What conditions motivate states to accept commitments championed by principled advocacy movements Joshua W Busby sheds light on these core questions through an investigation of four cases developing country debt relief climate change AIDS and the International Criminal Court in the G 7 advanced industrialized countries Canada France Germany Italy Japan the United Kingdom and the United States Drawing on hundreds of interviews with policy practitioners he employs qualitative comparative case study methods including process tracing and typologies and develops a framing gatekeepers argument emphasizing the ways in which advocacy campaigns use rhetoric to tap into the main cultural currents in the countries where they operate Busby argues that when values and costs potentially pull in opposing directions values will win if domestic gatekeepers who are able to block policy change believe that the values at stake are sufficiently important

Beyond Treaties: Rethinking Legal Mechanisms for International Climate Governance Türkan Gülce Budak, 2025-04-05 This open access book examines the implications of the shift towards minilateralism for international climate law analysing how climate related trade measures and Paris Agreement compatible platforms may enhance global climate governance The landscape of international climate change law is evolving from a traditional consensus based treaty model characterized by comprehensive yet often slow moving agreements toward a more pragmatic approach known as minilateralism In this emerging paradigm smaller groups of countries negotiate and implement trade measures aimed at mitigating climate impacts An exemplary case is the European Green Deal which introduces climate related trade measures as a key instrument for achieving sustainability goals within and beyond Europe Additionally countries are exploring minilateral cooperation platforms within the Paris Agreement framework to further their climate objectives The central questions to be addressed in this book are twofold First how can the design of the minilateral schemes comply with the Paris Agreement s international cooperation common but differentiated responsibilities and respective capacities and market based mechanisms principles Second to what extent does the climate related trade measures conform with the WTO regime particularly with the non discrimination principles of the trade law namely most favoured nation and national treatment
