

amount of work and ingenuity they put into the project went well beyond that of the four other teams in the program. I can still recall the team's oral progress report. After working on the project for only a few days, the team came up with a clever company name, Power Unplugged, and made a 60-second video that clearly and compellingly demonstrated their product concept. Their final business plan and presentation was, by far, the best of the five teams in the program.

I also had a chance to observe Suyashh during several team meetings and came away very impressed with his leadership ability. The SIBT program attracts students from all over the world and with varying levels of business knowledge. Given the compressed timeline for this project and its importance from a grading perspective, it would have been very tempting to simply rely on the strongest members of the team to get the work done. But not Suyashh. Through effective delegation and his collegial management style, he was able to get everyone on the team involved in the project in a meaningful way. And through coaching and encouragement, he helped various teammates—such as students who were reluctant to present to the class—overcome their weaknesses. In short, Suyashh brought out the best in everyone around him.

Regarding Suyashh's English skills, he was a frequent, articulate, and insightful contributor to our class discussions. His written assignments, such as case analyses, were concise, well-reasoned, and easy to read. Based on this, I believe Suyashh's written and oral English skills are well above what would be considered proficient for an applicant whose first language is not English.

Success in a Master's program, especially one as rigorous as Warwick's MSc in Supply Chain and Logistics Management, requires excellent academic skills, a thirst for knowledge, self-discipline, and a strong sense of direction. Having observed Suyashh very closely during the SIBT program and gotten to know him personally, I can say, with strong conviction, that he possesses all of these qualities—in abundance. He is serious-minded and highly motivated when it comes to his studies, and has a clear idea of what he wants to accomplish academically and professionally. In addition, he works extremely well with others, be they his peers or his professors.

Given all of these strengths, Suyashh has my highest recommendation for admission to Warwick's MSc in Supply Chain and Logistics Management program. He is unquestionably a talented student, with an exceptional mind, an extraordinary work ethic, and exemplary character. I feel fortunate to have had the opportunity to teach Suyashh, and I am sure your colleagues will feel the same way.

I hope my letter is helpful in evaluating Suyashh's qualifications for admission to Warwick University. If I can be of further assistance, please do not hesitate to contact me. I can be reached at 610-527-9502 or wmadway@wharton.upenn.edu. Thank you for your consideration.

Very truly yours,
