Construing Experience Through Meaning M.A.K. Halliday, Christian Matthiessen, 2006-05-16 The subject of this book is how human beings construe their experience of the world The construction of experience is usually thought of as knowledge represented in the form of conceptual taxonomies schemata scripts and the like The authors offer an interpretation that is complementary to this treating experience not as knowing but as meaning and hence as something that is construed in language In other words the concern is with the construal of human experience as a semantic system and since language plays the central role not only in storing and exchanging experience but also in construing it language is taken as the interpretative base The focus of the book is both theoretical and descriptive The authors consider it important that theory and description should develop in parallel with constant interchange between the two The major descriptive component is an account of the most general features of the ideational semantics of English which is then exemplified in two familiar text types recipes and weather forecasts There is also a brief reference to the semantics of Chinese Theoretical issues are raised throughout as they become relevant to the discussion with the theoretical base being drawn from systemic functional linguistics Both the theoretical and descriptive proposals offered in the book are compared and contrasted with approaches deriving from AI cognitive science and cognitive linguistics

Time, Consumption and the Coordination of Everyday Life Dale Southerton, 2020-08-17 Time pressure speed and the desire for instant consumption pervade accounts of contemporary lives Why is it that people feel pressed for time in what ways have societies changed to create this condition and with what implications This book examines critical contentions in the field of time and society ranging from the emergence and dominance of clock time and time discipline the time pressures associated with consumer culture through to technological innovation and the acceleration of everyday lives Through extensive analysis of empirical studies of the changing ways in which people organise and experience home work leisure consumption and personal relationships time pressure is shown to be a problem of the coordination and synchronization of activities Appreciation of temporal rhythms formed and reproduced through the organisation and performance of social practices is necessary to tackle the challenges of coordination and offers new avenues for analysing social issues such as sustainable consumption health and well being This book is essential reading for all of those interested in social change consumption and time including researchers and students from across the social sciences
