The process of determining whether the concept is feasible cost effective and beneficial is complex and should not be entered into lightly The price of failure is high and for that reason any outsourcing initiative demands robust project management skills strong support at board level and the unremitting support and commitment of every executive departmental head and senior manager in the company Particularly so in the case of such an overarching entity as the records management facility because all are major stakeholders in the outcome Much has been written about the concepts of outsourcing Research has revealed numerous books journal articles and case studies attesting to the relative merits but there is little to nothing available that is specific to a Records Management facility This title will prove invaluable for any librarian or information professional with a practical or academic interest in outsourcing or any students in the field of library science     Records Management Handbook for United States Senate Committees Karen Dawley Paul,1999
