Discuss

This essay aims to examine the reasons for and why it is important to have a separation of powers, to examine the United Kingdom's constitution, assessing our somewhat unclear separation of powers, and discussing the reasons why we do not have a strict separation, taking into account the overlaps and relationships between each limb of Government and the checks and balances required for it to operate efficiently.

The political doctrine of the Separation of Powers can be traced back to Aristotle, who states: "There are three elements in each constitution ..first, the deliberative, which discusses everything of common importance; second the officials; and third, the judicial element." This highlights the three elementary functions that are required for the organisation of any state. Nowadays, they are defined as the legislature, the executive and the judiciary, and are carried out by Government.

The legislature is the law-making body, and is comprised of the House of Commons and the House of Lords. The legislative function involves 'the enactment of general rules determining the structure and powers of public authorities and regulating the conduct of citizens and private organisations.

The executive is all the institutions and persons concerned with the implementation of the laws made by the legislature. It involves central and local government and the armed forces. The role of the executive '...includes initiating and implementing legislation, maintaining order and security, promoting social and economic welfare, administering public services and conducting the external relations of the state.

The judiciary is made up mainly of professional judges, and their main function is 'to determine disputed questions of fact and law in accordance with the law laid down by Parliament and expounded by the courts and ...is exercised mainly in the civil and criminal courts.'

The question which now arises is whether or not there should be a strict separation of each of the above functions. Locke stated:

..it may be too great a temptation to human frailty..for the same persons who have the power of making laws, to have also their hands the power to execute them, whereby they may exempt themselves from obedience to the laws they make, and suit the law, both in its making and execution, to their own private advantage.

Similarly, Montesquieu believed that:

When legislative power is united with executive power in a single person or in a single body of the magistracy, there is no liberty #46: is there

Separating Power Gerhard Casper, 1997. Casper offers a clear portrait of the issues of separation of power along functional lines: legislative, executive, and judicial in the founding period, as well as a suggestion that in modern times we should be reluctant to tie separation of powers notions to their own procrustean bed. Corwin on the Constitution Edward S. Corwin, 2019-06-30. Edward S. Corwin is the twentieth century's most eminent commentator on the Constitution. Unfortunately, he died before he could write the single definitive work on the Constitution he had planned. In three volumes of which this is the first, Richard Loss has edited and introduced major essays by Corwin that best delineate his argument in political thought and constitutional law. The essays in Volume One examine the foundations of American political and constitutional thought: the powers of Congress and the President's power of removal. Corwin addresses topics that vary from The Worship of the Constitution to The Constitution as Instrument and Symbol. He discusses the lessons of the Constitutional Convention of 1787, takes up the relationship of the Constitution to New Deal democracy, and examines democratic dogma and political science. A fascinating essay treating the theory of evolution shows how this idea replaced the idea of natural law in American constitutional tradition. Loss's introduction provides a biographical sketch of Corwin, elaborates and appraises his argument, and characterizes Corwin's legacy to the present generation of scholars. Loss shows that far from ending debate, Corwin's essays on political thought and the removal power establish an intellectual agenda for further inquiry into the tenets of constitutional law. In an epilogue, Loss deals with Corwin's understanding of Alexander Hamilton's position on the President's removal power, an important topic involving not only presidential prerogative but the comparative rank of Hamilton's Federalist papers on the presidency and Hamilton's Pacificus letters. Corwin on the Constitution will be of particular interest to judges, historians, law teachers, political scientists, students of constitutional law, and American political thought.

A case for the Enlightenment, ten essays Frits van Holthoon, 2017. The message of these essays is that the Enlightenment should not be regarded as a revolutionary programme for the future. The philosophers of the Enlightenment hoped to educate individuals in the light of modern science according to Kant's adage Aude sapere and did not want to change the structure of society. F. L. van Holthoon is emeritus professor of social history in the University of Groningen.

booknews.com The Deadline: Essays Jill Lepore, 2023-08-29 Jill Lepore is unquestionably one of America's best historians; it's fair to say she's one of its best writers too. Jonathan Russell Clark, Los Angeles Times Best Books of 2023 New Yorker TIME A book to be read and kept for posterity. The Deadline is the art of the essay at its best. Few if any historians have brought such insight, wisdom, and empathy to public discourse as Jill Lepore. Arriving at The New Yorker in 2005, Lepore with her panoramic range and razor-sharp style brought a transporting freshness and a literary vivacity to everything from profiles of long-dead writers to urgent constitutional analysis to an unsparing scrutiny of the woeful affairs of the nation itself. The astonishing essays collected in The Deadline offer a prismatic portrait of Americans: techno-utopianism, frantic fractiousness, and unprecedented but armed aimlessness. From lockdowns and race commissions to Bratz dolls and bicycles to the losses that haunt Lepore's life, these essays again and again cross what she calls the deadline, the river of time that divides the quick from the dead. Echoing Gore Vidal's United States in its massive intellectual erudition, The Deadline with its remarkable juxtaposition of the political and the personal challenges the very nature of the essay and of history itself.

Carrese, 2010-02-15 How did the US judiciary become so powerful, powerful enough that state and federal judges once vied to decide a presidential election? What does this prominence mean for the law, constitutionalism, and liberal democracy? In The Cloaking of Power, Paul O. Carrese provides a provocative analysis of the intellectual sources of today's powerful judiciary, arguing that Montesquieu, in his Spirit of the Laws, first articulated a new conception of the separation of powers and strong but subtle courts. Montesquieu instructed statesmen to cloak power by placing judges at the center of politics while concealing them behind juries and subtle reforms. Tracing this conception through Blackstone, Hamilton, and Tocqueville, Carrese shows how it led to the prominence of judges courts and lawyers in America today But he places the blame for contemporary judicial activism squarely at the feet of Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr and his jurisprudential revolution which he believes to be the source of the now prevalent view that judging is merely political To address this crisis Carrese argues for a rediscovery of an independent judiciary one that blends prudence and natural law with common law and that observes the moderate jurisprudence of Montesquieu and Blackstone balancing abstract principles with realistic views of human nature and institutions He also advocates for a return to the complex constitutionalism of the American founders and Tocqueville and for judges who understand their responsibility to elevate citizens above individualism instructing them in law and right
